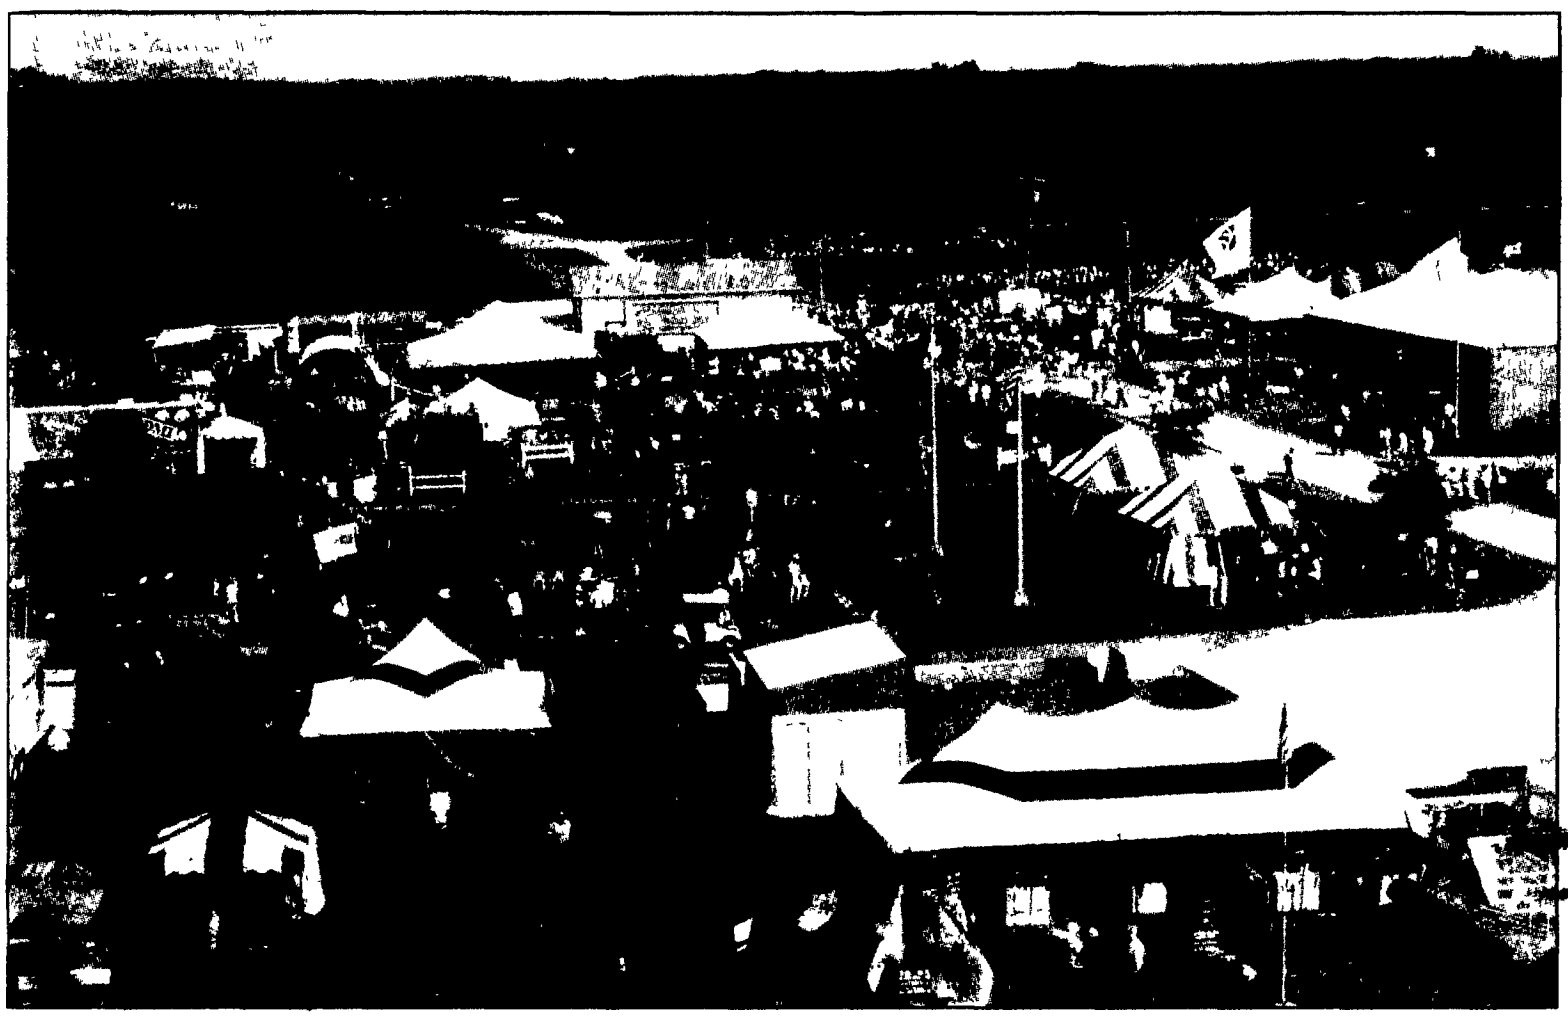
Vol. 44 No. 41 | Six Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, August 14, 1999 | $31.00 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy

Ag Progress, Penn State's Showcase Event, Opens Aug. 17



Hundreds of exhibitors and thousands of visitors will gather at this year's Ag Progress Days, Penn State's premier agricultural exposition, at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center. The center is located nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45. New and expanded activities for the farmer and family are included throughout this issue.

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Visitors can compete in a "largest weed" contest, walk through a corn maze, participate in a high-tech agricultural quiz show, or view 100 years of Pennsylvania dairy history at Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

The event's theme, "Harvest 2000: A Celebration of Progress," highlights a century of innovation and discovery in Pennsylvania agriculture. Sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Ag Progress Days is held at the university's Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, near State College.

Visitors seeking a challenge can wander down to the Crops and Soils Tent and try to make their way through the nearby "A Maze N Corn," a large corn maze where adventurous types can spend a few minutes or several hours testing their sense of direction. Instead of pulling pesky weeds, gardeners and farmers can bring in two of their largest weeds and try to win the "Largest Weed in Pennsylvania" contest. Visitors can enter two weeds that have been grown in Pennsylvania, and all entries must be cut off at ground level. There are two categories: broadleaf and grass. Prizes are awarded daily.

Twenty-five years ago, Susie and Aaron Glick, center, built a milk jugging operation and store on their Quarryville dairy farm. Today Maplehofe Dairy Farm Store is the only place in Lancaster County that continues to bottle milk in glass. Turn to page B6 to read about the history and the changes made by the Glicks' sons, from left, Sam, Merle, Elvin, and Calvin. Photo by Lou Ann Good.

Jill Neiman, seven-year Berks County 4-H Sheep and Lamb Club member, was recently crowed Berks County Lamb and Wool Queen at this week's Kutztown Fair. Read more about Jill's work in helping other members dress their sheep for the fairs this season on page B13. Additional coverage of the Kutztown Fair is included in this issue. Photo by Andy Andrews

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

In Chicago and the Eastern region, prices were unchanged to lower on the larger sizes, unchanged on the balance. Elsewhere, prices were unchanged. The market tone was steady at best to barely steady; trade sentiment was unsettled at times. Demand was mostly fair to moderate, instances good, with better movement usually confined to the occasional feature interest. Supplies of jumbo and extra large sizes were often closely balanced to instances tight, however, large eggs were at least adequate and the smaller sizes were in ample supply. Breaking stock supplies were more than adequate from regular sources and heavier nest run product garnered only occasional interest above the stated range. Light type hens remained fully adequate to ample for current processing schedules.

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying interest continued to decrease in light of some reported supply inadequacies. Offerings were generally closely balanced with needs, however breast items became increasingly difficult to obtain. Retail and distributive movement was mixed as promotional activity was scattered with consumer buying irregular. The market tone continued strong on limited supplies of breast items and generally steady to fully steady on the balance.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Beneficial rains and trade corrections pressured grain and soybean bids lower, today. Wheat 5 to 6 cents lower. Corn 6 to 10 cents lower. Sorghum 9 to 10 cents lower. Soybeans 4 to 8 cents lower. Wheat bid turned lower following corn and soybean price declines. Lack of fresh export news was also a pressure factor. Corn and soybean bids fell sharply lower due to beneficial moisture in the western Corn Belt areas, today. Forecasts are calling for additional rainfall over the next couple of days. Many areas remain dry, however, and traders expect lower production figures to be released in tomorrow's USDA reports. Light overnight export sales of corn and beans offered some support to bids.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

CAT NIGHTS BEGIN, AUGUST 17.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

August 19 marks the anniversary, in 1856, of Gail Borden's condensed-milk patent. Borden was a dairyman from Norwich, New York, who also made a living as a surveyor. He was the man responsible for laying out the city of Galveston, Texas, where he was also a customs collector. As a dairyman, he had experimented with and developed a process for evaporating milk. Once he got the financial backing of Jeremiah Milbank, he was able to open the Borden Milk Company Soon after, the Civil War intervened, creating a strong demand for his product, which was of great value to the armies Later, Borden went on to promote concentrated fruit juices

I am more of a sponge than an inventor.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ For mildly sunburned skin, make a cooling bath with a cup of apple cider vinegar added to tepid water.

CHOCOLATE CARAMELS

1 can (15 ounces) sweetened condensed milk
1 cup light corn syrup
1 tablespoon butter
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 ounces (2 squares) unsweetened chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

In a 1½-quart heavy saucepan, mix together ⅓ cup of condensed milk, corn syrup, butter, and salt Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture reaches 235° F on a candy thermometer (soft-ball stage). Stir in remaining milk. Stir in chocolate, a square at a time Boil until syrup reaches 235° F again. Remove and stir in vanilla. Pour into an 8x2-inch buttered pan Cool and cut into half-inch squares

Makes 1 pound.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

August sunshine and bright nights ripen the grapes.

In haying season, when there is no dew, expect rain.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.

OPINION

Ag Progress Is For Kids, Too

We often get caught up in concerns about the severe drought, about making monthly expense payments on the farm, on sick animals, and all the worrisome chores of farming.

Many of us decide we need a break. Those who can often take advantage of August's "dog days" and head to the mountains or the shore.

Some decide to attend the biggest statewide agricultural showcase event of them all — Ag Progress Days next week in Rockspring.

What many of us forget when we attend Ag Progress is there are lots of things for kids. More so than ever before, Ag Progress is becoming child- and family-oriented with an array of programs to delight the littlest and oldest ones in the family.

New this year is the "Farm Safety and Health Challenge Game," a contest which tests the farm safety knowledge of children. The contest is scheduled Tuesday, Aug. 17, in the College Exhibits Building Theatre. Youth will be competing for slots at the championship at next year's Pennsylvania Farm Show.

For the second year in a row, the Junior Livestock Exhibit Tent will be open for the annual Ag Progress Lamb Skillathon and Live Lamb Show Wednesday, Aug. 18 at 10 a.m. Watch youth test their sheep know-how and compete for prizes. The Skillathon tests knowledge in quality assurance, feed and nutrition, meat cuts, equipment, and management. The lamb show rewards contestants for their animal and showmanship skills. Prize money and savings bonds will be awarded to outstanding youth.

For the whole family, a new exhibit is the A Maze N Corn maze. Come in and get lost in Penn State's corn! Spend a few minutes, or even hours, with your kids in the fun corn maze.

4-H and FFA youth will compete for prizes in the Horse Show and Skillathon on Thursday, Aug. 19 at 11 a.m. at Ag Progress.

As usual, there are other annual events that make Ag Progress such a mid-summer tradition, including the SciQ and SciQ junior contests, which test children's "agricultural IQ." Contestants and audience members alike can win prizes, including SciQ T-shirts and Penn State University Creamery ice cream. SciQ is scheduled in the College Exhibits Building Theatre Wednesday, Aug. 18 at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. SciQ Junior, for kids between 8-12, will be played Tuesday, Aug. 17 at 10 a.m. and Wednesday at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

There are lots of other events for the whole family, so come on out!

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Monitor Water Supplies

Several farmers have seen their water source dry up because of the draught Now would be a good time to be monitoring your well or other water sources You should be developing contingency plans if your water source diminishes or dries up You may want to line up alternative sources of water, securing temporary water storage facilities, developing different water use patterns, Storing water and have a rationing plan Also, look for ways to conserve water, recycle water and control water leaks If you run low or out of water, contact your county emergency management office They may be able to help you find alternative water sources and temporary water storage Through proper planning and taking precautionary steps, you should be able to avoid a disaster

To Consider Herbicide Residue - 1

Two issues arise with the current draught situation in the Northeast, according to Dr William Curran, Penn State Agronomy Department One issue is the potential for herbicide residues in soil and subsequent carryover to rotational crops Herbicide re-crop restrictions are based on susceptibility of potential rotation crops to herbicide residues or are based on limits set by EPA for potential residue in feed or food crops In draught conditions, several herbicides have the potential to persist longer in the soil and injure susceptible crops In corn, pay particular attention to atrazine and simazine (Princep) which may cause problems in a normal year Most of the other corn herbicides with a few exceptions should not limit the ability to establish a fall forage crop if necessary Soybean herbicides may be another matter Several of our commonly used soybean herbicides limit planting of fall seeded crops as well as normal rotational crops. However, with the introduction of Roundup Ready soybeans and the use of Roundup, herbicide residues and rotation restrictions are less of a concern. Make sure you read and follow label directions

To Consider Herbicide Residue - 2

Two issues arise with the current draught situation in the Northeast, according to Dr. William Curran, Penn State Agronomy Department. The second issue is grazing and forage restrictions following the use of herbicides if early harvest or emergency forage is needed. As for grazing and forge restrictions, most corn herbicides allow grazing or harvesting of corn for silage following their use However, almost all products have some time interval or waiting period ranging from zero days up to 85 days following herbicide application. Other products specify a certain crop maturity being necessary before harvest Many soybean herbicides are more restrictive In fact only Basagran, FirstRate, Lexone, Sencor, Lorox, Liberty, Micro-Tech, Poast or Poast Plus, Prowl, Treflan and Roundup allow feeding of soybean forage following herbicide application The Roundup label specifies a 25 day pre-harvest interval following an in crop application of Roundup Check specific product labels for the correct time interval necessary before harvesting either corn or soybean for forage or silage and for more detailed information.

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN LIFE IS 'THE PITS'

Background Scripture:
Genesis 37:1-35
Devotional Reading:
I Samuel 18:1-9

I can identify with Joseph, can you?

One day everything is bright and sunny and life is really good; and the next day the sun is hidden by thick clouds and life is in "the pits." In Joseph's case this was true both figuratively and literally. How quickly we can fall from the "king of the mountain" to the "bottom of the pile."

As terrible as those pits are, have you noticed that we are more likely to find God there than anywhere else? When all is going well, we tend to forget about God, forget even to thank him that things are going so well.

I can also identify with Joseph in two other ways. First, he was a victim of his brothers' intense jealousy. Sometimes when we're in "the pit," it is because others have been jealous, resentful or contemptuous of us. I never had any brothers and sisters, but when I was a child I remember that some of my cousins were obviously jealous of me because I was an only child and did not have to share as they did. It didn't matter that I had never done anything to them.

ARE YOU 'SELF-ABSORBED'?

Secondly, Joseph, despite his innocence — or maybe because of it — contributed to the animosity, perhaps unconsciously but just as surely, Joseph was perhaps conceited, exasperatingly self-assured and self-absorbed. If Joseph had tempered his superior status as Jacob's favorite with a little humility, some awareness of his brothers' feelings, things might have been different. Some people cannot help being a favorite or blessed with superior circumstances, but they can carry this with some humility and sensitivity.

If, as a "slightly spoiled" only child, I had been more sensitive to my cousins' feelings, perhaps things might have been different. I think I was rather oblivious to their sensitivities — just as Joseph must have been to his brothers. Innocently, it seems, he blurts out his dreams to them. But, as one who was later to save his life, all Egypt and his family with the interpretation of dreams, shouldn't he have realized that these dreams — true or not — would be offensive to them? Should he not have been more careful of flaunting his long-sleeved coat, which was much superior to those of his brothers?

What Joseph did or didn't do helps us to understand but not justify the brothers' actions. Genesis tells us, ". . . when his brothers saw that their father loved him more than all his brothers, they hated him and could not speak peaceably to him" (37:4). Note that he says "could not" instead of "would not." Their hatred was so intense that they were barely able to restrain themselves. Can you identify with that?

PLAYING FAVORITES

Despite Joseph's insensitive behavior, their hatred was not just the result of what he did or didn't do, but what their father did. It was their father's blatant favoritism that helped to poison this family. So Jacob also bore responsibility for this sorry state of affairs. Having experienced the tragic consequences of his own mother's favoritism toward him. he made the very same mistake in his own family. This is something else with which many of us can identify.

So Jacob's tragic family — today it would be called "dysfunctional" — was attributable, not just to one person or situation. Jacob, Joseph and his brothers all shared in it — just as in our family problems and tensions today. We'd like to think that it is all someone else's fault, but that is rarely true, I find. It takes two or more to tangle.

When the episode closes, Joseph has been sold off into slavery, first to the Midianites and then to Potiphar in Egypt. Psychologically, he was still in the pit. Situationally, he did not seem to be any better off. But what we know and what he could not see then was that his life was entering a recovery stage. Eventually, his being sold into slavery would fulfill the grandiose but accurate dreams of his youth. God had not put him in the pit — that was the work of Jacob's family — but God took him out of the pit and was already at work turning this tragic experience into something good.

Can you identify with that?

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers sold steady to .50 higher. The market continues to find strength right through the dog days of summer. The record breaking drought is having only a minimal effect on the current fed cattle crop. The real results of this summer's disaster will show up next spring, as cattle feeders will have to either reduce numbers, purchase feed, or change their feeding program to account for their lack of a corn crop. Midwestern fed cattle traded steady to firm this week at 65.00 live and mostly 103.00 dressed. Local Holstein steers and a very light test of slaughter heifers traded steady. Slaughter cows sold 4.00-5.00 lower on a depressed boneless beef market, just as demand typically increases for the upcoming Labor Day holiday. Slaughter bulls ended 1.00-2.00 lower. Supply included 55 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 29 percent slaughter cows, 3 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

Hearing On Beef Checkoff Lawsuit This Week

BILLINGS, Mont. — In the first lawsuit of its kind in the nation, U.S. Department of Agriculture Administrative Law Judge Dorothea Baker will come to Billings, Montana from Washington, D.C. to hear arguments in a case against a Billings-area ranch couple charged with refusing to pay the mandatory one dollar per head Beef Checkoff fee.

Scheduled for August 4 at the Yellowstone County Courthouse, the hearing comes at the culmination of a nationwide campaign in which over 120,000 cattle producers have signed a petition calling for a vote to terminate the controversial Checkoff. Referendum supporters predict that by early fall they will have far exceeded the requirement that 10 percent of producers nationwide sign petitions to trigger a vote.

The case could have major implications for this internal battle within the cattle industry. USDA is seeking an $11,000 civil penalty against the Charter family for refusing to pay $250 in checkoff fees on cattle they sold in October 1997 and April 1998. The Charters boycotted the Checkoff on the grounds that USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service is acting illegally by approving grants totaling over $54 million in Checkoff funds annually for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

"The charges are directed against us, but in the eyes of thousands of cattle producers across the country it's USDA that's on trial here, not the Charter family," said Jeanne Charter whose family's third-generation ranching operation is located in the Bull Mountains north of Billings. "USDA and NCBA are way out of line. They're completely unaccountable to grassroots producers and they're using the power of government in support of policies that are destroying family operators nationwide."

Both individually, and as leaders of the grassroots Montana citizens group, Northern Plains Resource Council, the Charters have been outspoken critics of USDA and NCBA policies, and of the Checkoff in particular.

"There are other ranchers out there boycotting the Checkoff, but we were singled out because we've exercised our right to free speech," she said. "Now ranchers everywhere will be watching to see if we get a fair trial."

Congress established the Beef Checkoff in 1985 with the Beef Promotion and Research Act which mandates cattle producers to pay $1 per head for each animal sold in the U.S. The Act requires these funds to be used for beef promotion and research. In 1995 USDA approved the merger of two existing industry groups to create the NCBA. USDA designated the new group as the primary recipient of Checkoff funds.

Checkoff dollars currently fund close to 90 percent of NCBA's budget. Seventy-percent of NCBA's overhead costs, and two-thirds of the $10 million NCBA spends on staff salaries and benefits are funded with producers' Checkoff dollars. Many ranchers struggling to stay in business in the face of disastrously low cattle prices charge that NCBA is part of the problem.

USDA and NCBA's handling of the referendum campaign has only inflamed the anger of many grassroots producers. USDA is threatening procedural delays that could hold off a referendum for years. At the same time, tremendous controversy has erupted over USDA's refusal to stop NCBA from using millions of producers' checkoff dollars to fund a one-sided, pro-Checkoff public relations campaign targeted at winning the producer vote. Referendum supporters have had to raise all their funds privately.

"It's like forcing ranchers to pay a tax to fund Earth First!, and then allowing Earth First! exclusive use of that money to oppose efforts to repeal the tax," said Steve Charter.

On August 4, the Charters plan to argue that NCBA is not eligible to receive checkoff funds because the Act requires recipient organizations to have been active and ongoing prior to 1985.

They will also argue that NCBA is violating the Act's prohibition on using checkoff funds to lobby or in any manner influence governmental action. NCBA claims to conduct its lobbying activities using funds raised exclusively through voluntary membership dues. NCBA has only approximately 30,000 dues paying members, but in every public statement, including numerous comments in the Congressional Record, NCBA describes itself as "The marketing organization and trade association for America's one million cattle ranchers and farmers."

The Charters will argue that the Checkoff violates their right to free speech by forcing them to economically support an organization which they believe campaigns against their interests.

The Charters believe reestablishing open and competitive markets is the only hope independent producers have for winning a fair price for their cattle. They object to NCBA's strong advocacy for abandoning a competitive-bid market structure in the beef industry in favor of a centralized system controlled by a handful of giant multinational corporations. They say NCBA promotes increased vertical integration of the industry, opposes government policing or markets and directly subsidizes increased horizontal monopolization in the retail sector. Several NCBA projects provide millions of Checkoff dollars in promotional marketing assistance to SYSCO and other giant food conglomerates that already dominate the retail market. The Charters also point to NCBA's opposition to R-CALF's (the Rancher-Cattlemen's Action Legal Fund) anti-dumping lawsuit against Mexico; and NCBA's support for so-called free trade agreements which, they charge, allow conglomerates like IBP virtually unrestricted leverage to suppress competition and depress prices by flooding U.S. markets with cheap imported beef.

Finally, the Charters will argue that USDA has failed to uphold a provision of the Act requiring equitable and fair treatment for all segments of the beef industry that enjoy unique consumer identity. The Charters have a business called Country Marketing Services that markets grass-fed, hormone-free beef which, they argue, is a product that has a clear identity with consumers. However, a proposal for promotional assistance that they submitted under the Act was denied on the grounds that it did not fit within the Act's parameters.

"The cururent law is fundamentally unfair and needs to be reformed," said Jeanne Charter. "USDA has shown extreme favoritism toward NCBA and the status quo. The bottom line is Congress ought to act to fix this mess. Unfortunately Congress is doing nothing. We had to go out and get ourselves sued just to get a public hearing on the Checkoff."

Although NCBA supporters warn that the Checkoff battle will have an all-or-nothing outcome and ranchers can't afford to abolish the beef promotion program, the Charters say there is an alternative. The Northern Plains Resource Council supports a directable and refundable checkoff system that would give producers the choice of designating whether to send their money to NCBA or other groups such as R-CALF, or to opt for a refund.

Northern Plains Resource Council is acting as fiscal agent of a legal defense fund for the Charters, and the citizens group has worked to raise money to cover some of their legal expenses. "When any of our members choose to put themselves personally on the line, it's important that they're not out there on their own," said NPRC Chairman and Willard, Montana rancher Jerry Sikorski.

CHORE-TIME

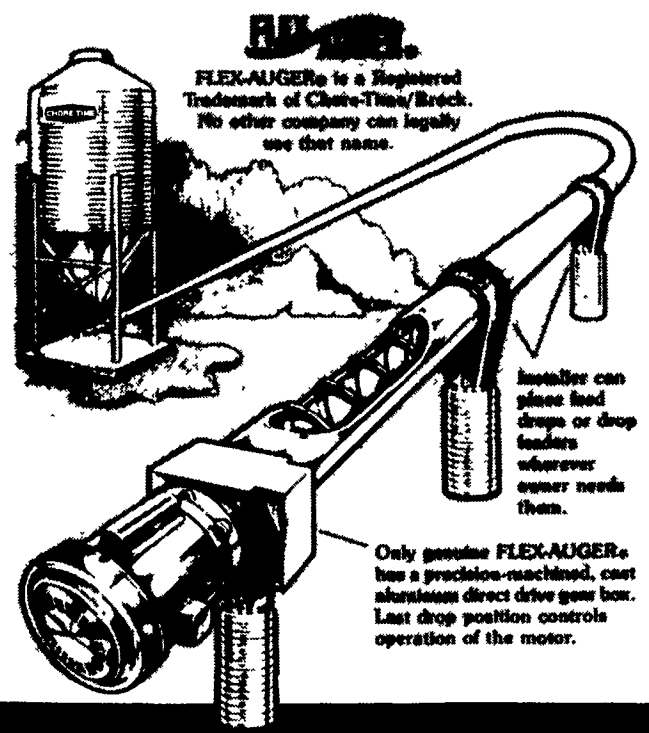
Hog Equipment Distributor

Chore-Time FLEX-AUGER®: the one and only

Don't be fooled. Chore-Time's FLEX-AUGER® Feed Delivery System has built a reputation as "The best way ever devised to deliver feed". It's so good, in fact, that several competitiors are trying to imitate it.

Cheap Imitations. While it may be that imitation is "the sincerest form of flattery", we feel sorry for producers who call us about problems with what they thought was FLEX-AUGER®. Turns out it was a substitute somebody sold them real cheap when they thought they were buying genuine FLEX-AUGER ®.

No Comparison. Others who have recently started trying to make a flexible auger aren't having much luck making a product as good as FLEX-AUGER®. Producers who buy these imitations have also come to this realization. This hardly comes as a surprise.



FLEX-AUGER® is a Registered Trademark of Chore-Time/Brock. No other company can legally use that name.
Installer can place feed drops or drop feeders wherever owner needs them.
Only genuine FLEX-AUGER® has a precision-machined, cast aluminum direct drive gear box. Last drop position controls operation of the motor.

After all, we invented the idea of coreless, flexible auger 30 years ago. And, we've continued to improve it with important innovations and refinements nearly every year since to give you better value for your hard-earned dollar. Unfortunately imitators often miss the finer points of a product's successful performance - points only obtained through years of design and manufacturing experience.

Genuine Advantages. So, if you want all the advantages that only genuine FLEX-AUGER® can give you: flawless feed conveying, extreme auger durability, wear-resistant and ultraviolet-resistant tube, direct-drive power unit (not belts), and Chore-Time's iron-clad "no fooling" warranty - make sure you get the one with the genuine FLEX-AUGER® logo right on the tube.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HONEY BROOK (Chester Co.) — One hundred and twelve buyers — including family members and friends — gathered for the annual Chester County 4-H Livestock Sale Wednesday evening here at the Romano 4-H Center.

Steers, hogs, and sheep went on the auction block at the sale, in its third year at the new 4-H center. Many animals were resold to benefit Chester County 4-H.

Beef Show

Eliza, daughter of Margaret and David Walton, Kennett Square, exhibited her registered Angus steer, "Domino," weighing 1,255 pounds. The steer sold to Hoss's Steak and Seafood House for $2 per pound.

The Unionville High School ninth grader's first grand champion at the roundup was named for a steer Eliza predicted would "be tough," she said, because it was the offspring of "the meanest cow." The dam was LB Enchantress Dura and the sire was Inspired of Hillcrest.

Eliza noted she named him Domino because she was worried about the effect he would have, considering his heritage. "When we selected him, he ran over the person (a friend) looking over him," Eliza said.

A pasture bull sired the steer. Eliza noted she spent a lot of time practicing showing him at home, walking him, and using a half can of spray paint to dress him for the show.

This was her fourth roundup The closest she came in her 4-H showing career at the roundup was reserve last year, noted Eliza's mother, Margaret.

Eliza has shown at several livestock events, including Cecil County, Maryland, Goshen, and is considering showing at the Keystone International Livestock Expo.

The 11th grade student at Owen J. Roberts High School showed a 1,338-pound purebred Angus, "Longshanks," named because it was so tall when it was born, said Phillip. The reserve champion sold to Northeast Baptist College, Downingtown, for 78 cents a pound.

Phillip, an eight-year Chester 4-H Beef Club member, manages 20 cows on his farm. The homebred steer's dam was K.W. Rose and Sedgwick Rebar sired it.

When selecting the steer, Phillip wasn't sure about what it could do. "The mother had trouble having it," he said. "We had to pull it."

After a few months of growth, Phillip decided the steer would do for the roundup. He walked it about a quarter mile every day as consistently as possible.

Swine Show

Phillip noted that when he picked the pig, he thought it was only "third best," he said, but found out it grew well. Phillip walked the hog twice a day one mile to a creek near his house.

Matthew Stoltzfus showed reserve of the swine show, a 247-pound York crossbred gilt and light heavyweight champion. The hog sold to Hoss's Steak and Seafood House for $2.50 a pound.

Matthew, 10, is the son of Tim and Jeanette Stoltzfus, Elverson. In the fifth grade at Twin Valley Elementary School, Matthew named the gilt "Gladys" in honor of "one of his (school) cafeteria ladies," according to Tim. The hog was purchased from Nelson Beam, Elverson.

Sheep Show

Chris Swartzentruber, 15, won grand champion of the lamb show with his 115-pound heavyweight lamb, which sold to Bonnie and Tom Swartzentruber, aunt and uncle to Chris, for $7 a pound.

Chris, son of John and Janet Swartzentruber, Glenmoore, is in the 10th grade at Twin Valley Bible Academy. The 6-month-old ewe, picked by Chris, was "what I was looking for in a lamb," he said.

The reserve champion lamb, also from the heavyweight class at 125 pounds, was exhibited by Julia Howe and purchased by F.A.M.I.L.I.E.S, the Ranck family, including Marla, Elizabeth, Jason, Martha Joy, Daniel, Catherine, Twila, Barbara, and Paul Ranck, Parkesburg.

Julia, 14, is the daughter of Lamar and Mary Howe, Downingtown. Julia, homeschooled, is entering ninth grade. She showed "Buckwheat," a wether, to reserve champion, purchased from New Holland Sales Stables. Julia said they walked the lamb almost every day, for about a quarter of a mile, in the evening.

Julia said she was grand champ-

Glickman Attends Empire Days, Carey Family Honored

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

SENICA FALLS, N.Y - More than 75,000 Northeast farmers and agribusiness representatives visited the 4,300 acre farm of Rodman Lott & Son, to experience first hand the 1999 Empire Farm Days sponsored by the Empire State Potato Growers, Inc. A highlight of the event was a visit from national Ag Secretary Dan Glickman.

After a tour of a local farm to see the drought damage, he came to the events building to announce that 34 counties in New York State had been declared agricultural disaster areas. All of New Jersey was also included in the declaration. This makes farmers eligible for emergency, low-interest loans because of losses due to excessive heat and drought.

Sen. Charles Schemer introduced Glickman and said he was brought to New York State to answer questions and see the drought conditions first hand. He said, low prices and the drought ha. provided a one-two punch for farmers this year.

"Many of our farm programs have been aimed at the Midwest," Schumer said. "My job is to try to change programs so they deal with our problems in the northeast. We need to get them to apply to our agriculture with small family farms as well."

Congressman Tom Renolds also welcomed the national ag secretary.

Glickman said other USDA assistance available to farmers in designated drought disaster areas include the Emergency Conservation Program, which provides cost-share funding for water conservation measures; federal crop insurance; and the non-insured Crop Disaster Assistance Program, which provides compensation for crop for which crop insurance is not available.

He said USDA is continuing to assess drought damage in other states that are seeking disaster declarations, including Connecticut, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Virginia. He was scheduled to visit a drought-damaged farm in Connecticut on Thursday.

STEWARDSHIP FAMILY

Another highlight was the awarding of the Environmental Stewardship Award to a New York State farm family that has demonstrated good environmental practices. This year's winner is the Daniel and Ann Carey family from Groton in Tompkins County. They and their children Andrew, 12; Ed, 11; Megan 9; and Eric 7 were honored at a luncheon on Wednesday.

The Carey dairy farm is located in the heart of the Owasco Lake Watershed, which serves as a drinking water source for the city of Auburn, making it an environmentally sensitive area. The farm came into the family in 1899 and the children are the 5th generation of the family to live on the farm.

The Careys have been proactive on conservation and environmental issues and have been willing to make necessary changes and advancements to maintain their competitive edge as the dairy industry has changed over the years.

The farm consists of 620 acres where they feed 190 milking Holsteins and 150 head of young stock. A big change in the farming operation came last year when Dan went from total confinement feeding to an intensive rotational grazing system. The results have been great and the family is pleased.

This stewardship award is sponsored jointly by the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, the Empire State Potato Growers, and American Agriculturist Magazine. This is the sixth year for the awards program.

Wrapping adapts well to any haying system. Both twine-tied and net-wrapped bales can be wrapped for silage. Along with being a low-cost silage investment, wrapping eliminates a need for shed storage space for your hay.

Progress in the Dairy Industry," focuses on how the state's dairy farmers grew from small one-man operations at the turn of the century to large-herd dairy farms using computer milking technology, state-of-the-art facilities and scientific management methods.

The College Exhibits Building will feature historical displays covering five eras from 1900 to 1999 and beyond. Visitors can see antique equipment and displays from 1900 to the Great Depression, detailing such Penn State research highlights as the Armsby respiration calorimeter and the start of the Penn State Ice Cream Short course.

A display on the era from 1933 to 1950 will highlight Penn State's role in modernizing the artificial insemination industry. The post-World War II boom years from 1950 to 1970 will represented by displays on Penn State nutrition research and the development of dairy barns, Visitors can see how mechanization, computerization and scientific management have created an efficient dairy industry for the 21st century. A display on dairying's future will detail such trends as nutraceuticals, dairy specialization, complete rations and information management. Other exhibits will include a milk house on wheels (a self-contained display of American dairy history owned and curated by Jim and Martha Roberts), a state-of-the-art milking parlor and a video of a robotic milking machine.

A historical grasp of agricultural information is required as visitors to Ag Progress Days participate in SciQ, played at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the College Exhibits Building Theatre, Wednesday, Aug. 18.

A special version of the show for children, called SciQ Jr., is played Tuesday at 10 a.m., and Wednesday at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m Patterned after television game shows, SciQ is hosted by local radio personalities, and contestants are chosen from the audience Admission is free.

The suburban homeowner or lawn-mowing fans will get a chance to test drive a variety of riding lawn mowers at the tractor ride-and-drive area. The popular attraction also gives agricultural professionals a chance to test and compare full-size tractors and other motorized farm equipment from different manufacturers in one location. Non-farmers are welcome to take a tractor or two on a test drive as well.

In the days before motorized tractors, agricultural work was accomplished using strong backs — human and animal. At the Pasto Agricultural Museum, visitors can examine items ranging from a varied collection of vintage milk bottles to a historical display of lighting technology. Many of the museum's dairy-related artifacts will be presented in a special exhibit.

ImAGination Station, Ag Progress Days' popular youth area, will feature a scavenger hunt requiring children to collect bits of information in and out of nearby tents and displays. Those who collect all the information bits win a prize. Younger children will be allowed to scavenge for information that can be found within ImAGination Station. Many of the discovery stations will focus on agriculture in the past 100 years and into the 21st century.

Storyteller Jan Kinney will perform in the College Exhibits Building Theatre Tuesday, Aug. 17 at 11:30 a.m. and Wednesday, Aug. 18 at noon, conjuring tales from memory for up to 45 minutes. The Family Room offers demonstrations on household financial management, as well as displays on cooking, health and nutrition.

Professional growers and farmers seeking a profitable crop alternative can visit the cut-flower demonstration plot, where horticulture experts will give advice on flower varieties and business plans. Lawn and garden experts also will be on hand to answer gardening questions at the Landscape, Lawn and Garden Tent adjacent to the cut-flower plots, throughout the event.

Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals sponsors the Farm Animal Learning Center exhibit, which appeals to both children and their parents. Young calves, lambs, pigs and other livestock will be on display, as well as retired racing greyhounds and miniature horses. Penn State agriculture students will answer questions.

Shaver's Creek Environmental Center will show wildlife such as owls, hawks, turtles and snakes at its nearby tent. In addition, the new Junior Livestock arena will feature youngsters competing in the Lamb Skill-a-thon and live lamb show. Be sure to check out the ventilated animal greenhouse, where visitors can see how to improve animal health, productivity and comfort.

Other family-oriented activities include horse events, including a horseshoeing demonstration, educational displays and food booths offering culinary treats ranging from breaded mushrooms to University Creamery ice cream.

Informational tours on woodlot management, grazing and stream bank conservation can be found at the Natural Resources Conservation Partnership area at West 11th Street. Near the tent, visitors can walk into a cutaway soil bank, showing the various soil tiers within Pennsylvania's farmland. Buses will depart from the tent each day to take visitors on various tours demonstrating conservation techniques.

Bus tours leaving from the corn crib throughout each day will illuminate Penn State's research on potatoes, integrated crop management, fruit and vegetable production and many other programs.

There will be free CATA bus service all three days of the exhibition. The shuttle departs from College and Allen streets (near the Corner Room restaurant) in downtown State College on the half-hour from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Aug. 17-19. On August 18, when Ag Progress Days remains open until 8 p.m., there will be additional hourly departures from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Departure times for the return trip are hourly from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 17-19, with hourly shuttles from 5 to 7 p.m. Aug. 18. Shuttle riders will be dropped off at Schlow Library in downtown State College.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits. The Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center is located nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours on Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 through Aug. 19. Or, if you have access to the Internet, visit Ag Progress Days on the World Wide Web at http://apd.cas.psu.edu.

Novice Shows Market Lamb Champion At Kutztown Fair

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — In her first year of showing, 9-year-old Justine Bennecoff swept the competition by showing the grand champion market lamb at the Kutztown Fair on Wednesday.

Originally the purebred Dorset was to be part of the family's breeding flock, but the ram became so rowdy in knocking down water containers and feeders that the family decided to turn him into a wether for the market lamb competition.

The champion had been purchased from Barry and Bruce Snyder. Before clinching the market lamb title, it was named champion Dorset ram in breeding competition.

Justine has four sheep, one which was named Kimberton Fair 4-H champion.

Jill Neiman showed the reserve champion market lamb, her own homebred, a purebred Oxford named Angel. During Kutztown Fair festivities, Jill was crowned Berks County Lamb and Wool Queen, and also was named champion fitter and reserve champion showman. Read more about Jill on page B13.

Water Woes Now, But Potential Soil Loss Later, Unless Proper Conservation Practices Are Used

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — "People are desperate," said Gary Smith, assistant state conservationist with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). "They just don't know what to do. They feel helpless."

Smith spoke to Lancaster Farming recently about the state's ongoing drought emergency.

Even though the drought has destroyed many crops in the state, there could be concerns even when the rain does start to fall.

For crop managers, taking a long, hard look at how they manage their soils will be crucial in the next several months.

Smith noted that, in fields that are conventionally tilled with no cover crop and no residue, the impact of raindrops will create soil loss problems. With no cover, wind effects can create soil erosion. And unless there is some kind of organic residue left over in the soils, the water retention won't be there — and soil can be lost to rainfall.

When it finally does rain, Smith said, and the rain hits the soil, the force will dislodge soil particles, causing soil to erode. Any kind of cover would keep raindrops from turning into an enemy of the soil and severe winds from tossing soil into the air and carrying it away.

The "best" kind of scenario for the drought, if there ever was one, according to assistant state conservationist, would be a no-tilled field following a proper rotation that has enough residue to hold the soil in place. No-till soil also has natural crevices to aid in the absorption of water.

No-till soil also allows root channels, from previous crops, to allow water to penetrate the soil and be absorbed. And earthworms present in no-tilled fields create tunnels for water to permeate.

The worst type of soil conditions that could create hazardous soil loss are conventionally tilled, destroyed soil structure with little or no residue and little cover crop. Soil losses can be tremendous from this type of soil management system.

Even weeds in fields can be a good thing in a drought, at least to retain soil structure.

The less natural residue, according to Smith, the more soil loss we have. When it does rain, waters can flood without something there to retain them.

Smith cautioned, however, that there is little one can do now to stem the drought or to aid crops. "There are not many answers when it gets this bad," he said.

But water conservation has to remain tops in the mind, as private wells dry up and farmers are desperate for other sources of water to maintain their livestock and homes.

Last week the Clinton Administration ordered drought aid payments be made to farmers in the region, including Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Virginia, and West Virginia. On Monday, federal officials declared West Virginia and parts of neighboring states official disaster zones.

Recently, in a release from Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr., (R-147), chairman of the Pennsylvania House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, Bunt noted how the drought was taking its toll on farmers.

"This hot and dry summer," said Bunt, "is shaping up to be a very bad one for farmers and the many companies that depend upon agriculture . . . for their business." Bunt noted that crops are withering in the fields, milk production is down dramatically, and that the state is working with the federal Farm Service Agency to monitor the effects of the severe drought on crops and livestock.

Many counties in the state are under a drought emergency declared in July by Gov. Tom Ridge. At this time, water used for the production of food and fiber and livestock maintenance is not subject to mandatory restrictions, but Bunt and others have urged farmers to conserve.

Water rationing looms on the horizon.

"We've had lower-than-normal rainfall for a year now," Bunt said, "and both surface water and ground water reserves are at very low levels." But we must all work together to conserve water.

More information about the drought emergency is available from the Pa. Department of Environmental Protection website, www.dep.state.pa.us, or the Pa. Dept. of Ag website, www.pda.state.pa.us.

Also, Penn State warns that drought conditions can take a severe toll on livestock. "All producers should be alert for special problems that can occur during a drought," said Larry Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science at Penn State.

The include:

• Overheating. All animals can overheat, but animals at special risk include draft horses or oxen, horses being exercised, very young animals, very old animals, and pregnant animals or those who recently delivered offspring. "Watch for rapid, shallow breathing and a reluctance to move," said Hutchinson. "If the rectal temperature is more than 105 degrees, apply cold water by hose or wet burlap bags."

• Lack of drinking water. As wells go dry and streams dry up, farmers may consider supplementing water to animals. But giving too much water at one time to livestock that have been deprived can cause edema (swelling because of excess fluid), nervousness, and red-colored urine.

• Poisonous plants. Often only the weeds and toxic plants are the ones surviving a drought-condition pasture. Normally livestock would ignore these plants — but not in a drought. "Walk your pastures once a week to check on edible materials," said Hutchinson. "Farmers should feed supplemental roughage and clip pastures to keep noxious and poisonous weeds under control."

• Blue-green algae. This variety can overgrow in a stagnant pond during extremely hot, dry weather. The algae is poisonous to livestock if ingested. "If a pond can be aerated, do so," said Hutchinson. "Otherwise fence off the pond and offer the animals another water source."

• Nitrate accumulations. Annual weeds, sudangrass, corn, and small grains can have high nitrate levels in a drought. Dry conditions followed by rainfall can cause plants to absorb nitrates very quickly. "If the plants are grazed or baled as forage, farmers should use caution feeding it to animals," he said.

To minimize the effects of drought, farmers should provide shade and air movement, particularly during the hottest part of the day, sprinkle confined animals with cool water to relieve heat stress, give livestock access to salt and water, provide a clean, algae-free source of water to animals at all times, and supply almost all pastured livestock with supplemental feed during the drought.

Pennsylvania is not the only state affected by drought. The New York Farm Bureau noted last Saturday that drought conditions are acute in western and southern New York, including Long Island, despite recent rains.

John Lincoln, president of the bureau, noted that after two years with severe and unusual storms, the weather continues to be uncooperative, and that he has contacted Nathan Rudgers, New York's Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, to alert him about the drought in the state. Should it be necessary, farmers in the state may also have to seek federal assistance for crop damage from dry conditions.

Late last month it was announced that Maryland Gov. Parris N. Glendening that emergency assistance will be available for cover crop and feed — $3 million worth — to Maryland farmers. The emergency assistance program was one of the actions the governor included in his executive order issued to address the state's drought emergency.

"Our farmers are hurting," Gov. Glendening said at a news conference recently. "Maryland farmers watch as their fields of corn, soybeans, and other crops wither and die before they reach maturity, as their ponds dry up, and as hay that was produced for use over the winter has to be used as feed for livestock now."

All have urged farmers to conserve water, any way they can.

Even rainfall, when it arrives, will do little quickly to ease drought stress. With many areas almost a foot of rain behind normal, water conservation measures will have to continue well into the fall.

Penn State Offers On-Line Drought Resources

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A computer-based clearinghouse of information to help Pennsylvania citizens deal with drought-related concerns is now available on a World Wide Web site maintained by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

A special section of the site, called HayNet, is designed to help drought-stricken agricultural producers find sources of forage for feeding their livestock.

"With Pennsylvania and the Northeast suffering through one of the worst droughts in decades, we wanted to give the public quick and easy access to information they can use to help them through this difficult situation," said Robert Steele, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "We're offering information on topics ranging from managing drought-stressed livestock to home water conservation and caring for gardens and landscapes."

Computer users with access to the World Wide Web can visit the college's homepage at http://www.cas.psu.edu and click on "Drought Information." There, they'll find fact sheets, news releases and other information in eight categories: dairy and livestock; landscape, lawn and garden; farm safety; forestry and wildlife; crops, soils and turf; ornamental and fruit trees; family, consumer and health; and public policy and reducing water use.

Links are provided to other drought resources, including state and federal government Web sites and forage-for-sale sites, including HayNet.

When drought causes significant crop losses, agricultural producers may run out of forages to feed animals such as dairy cows. With more than 10,000 commercial dairy farms housing more than 600,000 cattle, dairy is Pennsylvania's largest agricultural sector.

To help producers find off-farm sources of forage, the College of Agricultural Sciences, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and USDA's Farm Services Agency, has launched HayNet, which was last activated during the drought of 1997.

"HayNet is a listing of hay dealers throughout Pennsylvania and beyond," said Jack Watson, Penn State Cooperative Extension state program leader for agriculture and natural resources. "The list contains names, addresses, telephone numbers and types of hay available. We just provide the contact information. The farmer then has to contact the dealer to negotiate a price for the hay."

The service is free for buyers and sellers. Farmers without World Wide Web access can call or visit their local Penn State Cooperative Extension office. Extension staff will access the Web site for information on forage dealers in their area.

Farmers with forage and grain for sale can be added to the HayNet dealer list by contacting any Penn State Cooperative Extension county office or by calling (814) 863-3449.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebnaon Co.) — The Dale and Thelma Hostetter family, owners of Dale-Pride Holsteins, recently showed the grand and reserve grand champions in the Lebanon Area Fair open disivion Holstein Show.

The family was also named premier breeder and exhibitor of the show.

Judge for the show was David Castrogiovanni of Montrose, Susquehanna County.

The Hostetters, with the main farm in the Bellegrove area of North Annville Township, have been frequent recipients of honors at the Lebanon Area Fair Holstein show.

Exhibiting the pair of grand champions marks a significant showing achievement at the traditionally competitive Lebanon Fair show. In three out of the past four years, the Hostetters have done such a thing — 1996, 1998 and now 1999.

Alan Hostetter performed showmanship duties on the grand champion, which was also named best bred and owned of the show. The trophy is annually sponsored and presented by Morrissey Insurance of Ephrata.

Farmers Should Watch Trade Negotiations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — International trade negotiations scheduled for the end of this year in Geneva may have an impact on Pennsylvania farmers, according to an agricultural economist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The coming round of World Trade Organization negotiations will examine tariffs and trade restrictions on a variety of products, including agricultural commodities and processed foods.

David Blandford, head of Penn State's department of agricultural economics and rural sociology, said Pennsylvania farmers should lend the American delegation its enthusiastic support.

"Many of Pennsylvania's commodities are highly protected in international markets," Blandford said. "We face disadvantages because of very high tariffs on things like dairy products, which often reach 300 percent or more in key markets. There's no way we can compete internationally with tariffs that are so high. During this round of trade negotiations, we need to get those tariffs down."

Blandford said that fruits and vegetables are also subjected to tariffs in many foreign countries, as well as a variety of processed foods — all important Pennsylvania exports.

"Pennsylvania farmers and the agriculture industry need to lend their support to these negotiations," Blandford said. "President Clinton has been having a tough time getting Congress to give him the negotiating authority. It's crucial that Congress gets the message that these tariffs are important for agriculture. We need to give the president the authority to negotiate on trade by contacting our members of Congress and by making sure that our professional and trade organizations are also getting the message to legislators.

"Agricultural trade has been heavily protected since the 1930s," Blandford said. "Most nations around the world—including the United States—use import barriers to protect their local food production and processing industries. It's only since we completed the last round of trade negotiations in 1994 that the U.S. began to make some progress in opening up foreign markets to U.S. farm exports. We have a chance to make some significant progress this time around. American markets are not totally open, of course, but we've changed some of our domestic agricultural policies, and we're moving toward a more open market position."

Blandford said to expect long, difficult negotiations as countries wrangle to make the fewest concessions on their own markets, while gaining the best possible opportunities to export to other countries.

"It will be give-and-take," he said. "Obviously, we'll have to make concessions on our own tariffs.

Homebred Hogs Swine Champions At Kutztown Fair

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

When selecting the hog champion of the heavyweight class, Grumbine said the blue butt pig "combines the most positive things."

Grumbine noted the grand champion market hog, from the medium heavyweight class, brings a package to the show ring that is "close to market weight," Grumbine said, with "a tremendous amount of definition, a good, clean top, and a hog that moves away and is free in all four corners. It will hang an exceptional carcass."

George, 14, is the son of Tim and Teresa Billig, New Tripoli. The Northwestern High School sophomore was in Washington, D.C. with an exchange student from Japan, noted George's father, Tim. So George's brother Daniel, 14, Northwestern Middle School, showed the 222-pound homebred York/Hampshire crossbred nicknamed "Matilda" by George's mother, Teresa.

John C. Strawbridge, Whitehall, showed reserve market swine. John, 15, son of Donna Strawbridge, showed a 252-pound Duroc/Spotted crossbred gilt from the heavy heavyweight class, also homebred.

John, a sophomore at White Hall High School, noted it was a combination of feeding, breeding, and exercise that garnered the champion. John said he allows the hog to run around in a "playpen" some time every other day, about 10 minutes at a time in the heat and longer when the weather cools.

John will be showing at the upcoming Allentown, Sullivan County, Bloomsburg, and York fairs, in addition to the Keystone International Livestock Expo and state Farm Show.

Breed champion went to the Duroc February gilt shown by Jared Treichler. The Duroc "combines a lot of positive things," said Daryl Grumbine, show judge. The gilt "will suit everyone well in the farrowing crate," he said, calling the gilt "a long muscle pattern kind of sow."

Jared, 15, Fleetwood, is the son of Sandra Stump and Rodney Treichler. Jared, a Fleetwood High School sophomore, nicknamed the gilt "Ruby" because "I thought it was a good name," said Jared. "It was a gem."

This was the first supreme champion hog at Kutztown for Jared. He purchased the hog from Howard Parrish, Ohio.

There were a total of 105 market swine registered for the show, in addition to 76 breed swine and 35 exhibitors.

Following is a list of show placings.

Tipping The "Want" Scales In Your Favor

People may want a product or service, but there are three problems that can hold them back from buying:

Problem No. 1 — Dormant Want: These suspects may have an unrecognized want, but don't know about your company and your product and service solutions.

Solution: Consistent, education-based marketing makes people aware of your specific, problem-solving capabilities.

Problem No. 2 — Passive Want: Your prospects may want what you have, but are afraid or slow to make a decision; are evaluating your competition; or have an inaccurate belief or perception about your product or service.

Solution: Provide an irresistible offer (e.g., time-limited discount, a 2-for-1 sale, frequent buyers savings, and iron-clad guarantee or warranty). Educate your prospect about your specific advantages, including results-oriented success stories and third-party endorsements.

Problem No. 3 — Potential Want: They may want what you have, but can't afford it now.

Solution: Create payment terms, offer credit. If they are true prospects, stay in touch (e.g., build a relationship) so they immediately think of you when they are ready to buy.

Sell To People's Wants Not Needs

We've all heard or read that the essence of marketing is to "find a need and fill it."

Well, unless you have deep pockets, or know exactly what the world needs, here's a fail-safe formula that will skyrocket your success:

Find a Want and fill it!

Most of us have enough food, shelter, clothing and transportation.

We don't need much more. But we want more.

We need food, but we want fast foods, diet foods and gourmet meals.

We probably don't need a six-bedroom, 4 ½ -bath home, but we may want one.

We don't need expensive designer clothes, but we want them.

We probably need a car, but we want a Lexus, or a Lincoln.

We don't need 60-minute audio tapes, we want to gain wisdom quickly and conveniently.

We don't need insurance. We want security and protection.

"Irresistible Offers" Can Lead To Faster Sales

Your mission is to get your prospects or clients to act on your offer sooner than later.

That means using interactive marketing techniques that ask them to write, phone, request free literature, take advantage of a free initial offer or seminar, return a coupon or send a check.

Remember, your prospects need (and like) to be given clear, precise directions and it's your job to tell them what to do!

Use A Deadline

Why are offers so effective?

Think about human nature. People naturally respond better to deadline pressure (remember exams?) and will act faster if they feel they're going to lose out on something.

So, whenever possible, try to create a sense of urgency with time-limited, product-limited, one-time-only offers and fast-response discouts to boost your chances for greater responses and results.

NFU: Farm Relief Falls Short

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) this week announced that a Senate-passed farm relief amendment is a good first step, but needs work in order to meet the full scope of need in the countryside.

The measure, approved Wednesday during debate over the fiscal year 2000 agriculture appropriations bill, contains roughly $7.5 billion in emergency assistance.

"We are pleased the Senate has moved to pass relief now, as we had advocated, but the package falls short," said NFU President Leland Swenson.

"The delivery mechanism doesn't target assistance to producers who are actually farming and suffering losses. There is no recognition of the drought that has devastated crops and pastureland across the country. Moreover, the overall size of the package is not enough to offset nearly two years of falling prices and numerous weather disasters."

Specifically, NFU's positions are:

• The delivery mechanism is flawed because it does not guarantee that payments will go to producers facing production and income losses. The bill would deliver relief via Agricultural Market Transition Act (AMTA) payments, which are based on what farmers planted five years ago, not today, and on yields computed in the 1980s. NFU is advocating an alternative that would funnel aid to farmers who experienced losses this year.

• The package does not address the severe drought and other weather disasters affecting farmers in several regions of the country. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman yesterday declared 89 counties in six states agriculture disaster areas due to dry weather.

• The overall amount of funding is not enough to make up for the level of economic and production losses suffered by farmers and ranchers. Many commodity prices are at 30-year lows and price projections for 1999 show a decline of 42 percent for wheat, 39 percent for corn, and 26 percent for soybeans, since 1996.

• The assistance is not provided in an equitable manner. "Producers in all regions of the country, regardless of commodity, are reeling from low prices and weak markets," said Swenson. NFU will press for more equitable relief for producers of livestock and specialty crops.

"We hope the conference committee will move to fix these problems before passing final legislation. We will continue to press for a better crafted package that will begin to alleviate the distress in farm country," Swenson said.

Land O'Lakes, Swiss Valley Farms Partner In Fluid Milk

ST. PAUL, Minn. and DAVENPORT, Iowa — Land O'Lakes and Swiss Valley Farms announced plans to partner in a joint venture which would combine the fluid milk and cultured dairy product businesses of the two organizations.

Following recent approval by the boards of directors of Land O'Lakes Inc. (St. Paul, Minn.) and Swiss Valley Farms Co. (Davenport, Iowa), the member-owned cooperatives proposed the formation of the alliance on, or about, Oct. 1.

The venture, with combined annual revenues of $480 million, would bring together the two cooperatives' six Midwestern milk and juice bottling plants and two cultured dairy product plants.

The Land O'Lakes plants are located in North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Swiss Valley plants are located in Iowa and Illinois.

The plants, which now package more than 150 million gallons of milk annually, as well as a variety of juices, extended-shelf-life products and cultured dairy products, serve customers across a 13-state region.

Swiss Valley Farms Chief Executive Officer Gene Quast said the proposed venture reflects the changing industry environment.

"The fluid milk industry is going through a tremendous amount of change and consolidation and that is having a direct impact on the producer, the processor and the marketer of packaged milk," Quast said.

"Our goal, on behalf of our members, is to remain a strong and competitive force in this industry. The net result of this alliance will accomplish this by improving total value to all customers, expanding geographic reach and increasing value to member-owners of Swiss Valley Farms and Land O'Lakes."

The Land O'Lakes/Swiss Valley Farms alliance will benefit members fo both organizations, Land O'Lakes President and Chief Executive Officer Jack Gherty said.

"This venture will bring value to both cooperatives and provides exceptional opportunities to extend and enhance our presence in the marketplace, take full advantage of the Land O'Lakes and Swiss Valley Farms brand names, and meet our customers' demands for efficiency, broad geographic reach and diverse product lines," Gherty said.

Land O'Lakes is a national food and agricultural cooperative owned by farmers, ranchers and local cooperatives in 29 states. It is a leading marketer of fluid milk products in the Midwest; a leading marketer of a full line of dairy products across the United States; serves international customers with a variety of food and animal feed ingredients; and provides farmers and local cooperatives with an extensive line of agricultural supplies.

Swiss Valley Farms Co. is a five-state cooperative owned and controlled by producers.

The cooperative operates milk bottling plants in Dubuque, Iowa and Chicago, Ill. and a cultured and specialty product plant in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Swiss Valley Farms has manufacturing plants in Luana, Iowa; Mindoro and Platteville, Wis.; and a chesse packaging plant in St. Olaf, Iowa.

It has an Ag Services Division with locations at Winthrop, Manchester, Monticello, Independence, Hopkinton, Farley, Cascade, Center Junction, Central City and Answer, all in Iowa, including a convenience store in Dyersville.

The Ag Services Division distributes farm inputs such as fertilizer, feed, grain, petroleum and farm hardware to members.

USDA Announces Additional Cash Payments To Hog Farmers

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The USDA has announced it has re-opened its program to assist small- and medium-sized hog operations by allocating an additional $100 million in payments to be made, starting in August.

"The current farm crisis has been disastrous for small hog producers, so this additional assistance is really needed," Vice President Al Gore said in making the announcement.

"We made $50 million in cash payments to hog farmers earlier this year and also stepped up government purchases of pork on our aggressive effort to help during this time of need."

Many American hog farmers are suffering because of the lowest prices in 50 years. The new funds build on the $50 million already paid to hog farmers earlier this year, providing more money to an even greater number of hog farmers.

Sign-up for the new round of assistance began August 9.

Hog farmers who received the earlier payments will automatically receive the new payment in August, and are not required to reapply or fill out additional paperwork.

Farmers seeking payments for the first time will receive checks within a few weeks of their sign-up.

Eligible producers will receive $10 per slaughter-weight hog marketed during the last six months of 1998 on up to 500 market hogs (or an equivalent number of feeder pigs or other swine).

Hog farm operators who received payments under the earlier disbursement would receive a prorated amount to bring their total payment amount to $10 per slaughter-weight hog or equivalent.

Payments would be limited to hog operations that produced hogs in the United States and sold less than 2,500 hogs during the specified marketing period.

If the operation is owned by one or more individuals or entities with annual gross revenue of $2.5 million or more in farming and ranching operations in calendar year 1998, the payment would be reduced by a pro-rated share.

Hog operations are not eligible for payment on hogs marketed under a fixed price or cost-plus contracts.

The Administration has taken a number of other steps to assist America's hog farmers, including increasing USDA pork purchases, promoting increased pork exports, and extending additional financial protections to hog farmers.

Farmers in Lancaster County may apply for their share of payments at the Farm Service Agency located at the Farm & Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster.

Producers will be required to certify that they meet the eligibility requirements of the program.

State Grange Holds Pre-Convention Conference

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange on Monday held its annual pre-fall state legislative session and pre-convention conference at the Super 8 Motel in Harrisburg.

The all-day meeting was for State Grange committee leaders, to provide them with proposals for possible resolutions for policy adoption during the annual convention, and to provide a forum for learning more detail about current issues and concerns to the Grange.

On hand to speak were Al Wenger, of Wenger Feeds; Vernon Ross, newly appointed executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission; Barry Frantz, with the Pennsylvania office of the USDA Natural Resource and Conservation Service; Les Lanyon and Todd Bowersox who are involved with Penn State University's project of year-round land-application of treated wastewater; Christine Kellet, director of the Penn State University Agricultural Law Research and Education Center at Dickinson School of Law; Fritz Bittenbender, a representative from Gov. Tom Ridge's office; and state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes.

Committee members were also handed a packet of proposals for policy adoption to review, and the Dairy Committee was given an assignment of reviewing what the Grange could do with respect to the drought.

State Grange Master William Steel was delayed in the morning because of a request by Gov. Tom Ridge to attend a meeting, along with representatives of the other state agricultural farm organizations, concerning the drought and emergency declarations.

While state and federal officials last week said that it would be later this week until top officials would meet to review documented crop losses for federal disaster consideration, that work was moved up and some was done over the weekend to speed the process, according to Steel. That was supported later by state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr.

When Steel arrived at the Grange conference, he reported that early figures showed that on average, the state's farms have suffered at least a 30-percent loss of one crop.

In subsequent news announcements later in the week, it was reported that additional counties in Pennsylvania were added to the list of federally declared disaster areas, making farmers in those counties eligible for low interest emergency loans.

Al Wenger, of Wenger Feeds, addresses the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Al Wenger began the meeting with a frank and open discussion of the current state of affairs for agricultural production, risk management, and public opinion.

His theme was the importance of getting along with neighbors.

He said that the divisiveness of the agricultural production community has created additional problems for itself, because the general consuming public, uncertain for the most part as to the origination of its foods, has taken to using undefined terms perpetuated by the agricultural community, such as "factory farm," "family farm," and "corporate farming."

"What do these terms mean?" he asked the audience. "There is no definition. What is a 'family farm?'"

He said that there are two key issues he wanted to discuss: the big picture of the economic revolution; and the role of the individual in economic ventures and why agriculture is always held special.

He noted several of the tax and legal allowances made for agricultural that aren't allowed for other enterprises, such as road use, etc., and said, "While we gladly accepted all these goodies, those people giving us goodies are not sure what you're doing."

Furthermore, he said, "No matter how special (agriculture is treated) you can't reverse the laws of economics.

"In a lot of ways ... we've allowed the public to mislead themselves about what we're about, and it has caused the conflicts we have today."

He explained the disconnect between the public's concept of farming, governmental regulatory oversight, and the reality of competitive successful agriculture.

He said that at some of the public meetings and hearings he's attended on behalf of agriculture, especially in connection with proposals to construct high-yield facilities, that some of the objections have been based on such things as a comparison to the number of people in a community to the number of animals to be raised in a facility, as though that had any relevance.

The agricultural community itself has to come together on defining itself, and stop disparaging operations that are different or more efficient, he said.

There is no going back to a system of agricultural production that relies mostly on speculative production without assurances of a market.

And there is no going back to a system of commodity processing that allows for unreliable delivery.

He said that the cost to construct and operate a processing facility that complies with the intent of food safety, environmental concerns, labor laws and other regulated aspects, and international competition requires a steady and known flow of commodity to processor to market.

In the past, he said, United States agriculture was much like other businesses, in that it produced what it wanted and offered that to the market, at a price it wanted to receive.

Other businesses have been forced to find out what the consumer wants and to produce it at a cost acceptable to the consumer. That is the same challenge to United States agriculture, he said.

The system has changed to one that provides consistent quality and proportions from the producer to the processor and from the processor to the marketer and from the marketer to the consumer.

Size of operation is irrelevant, he explained, because opportuities for success lies in the ability to produce a product that is in demand.

A number of smaller farms have been exploiting niche markets, he said, and are prospering.

"Farms of all sizes are needed," he said.

As far as with the poultry industry, individual contract production operations have to comply with regulations and need to be good neighbors because there is too much at stake.

For example, he said Wengers requires its contract producers to have nutrient management plans, he said, because, if they don't, eventually they will get in trouble. He said Wengers can't afford to lose producers, because dependability of product quality and quantity to the processor are major values to others in the food delivery system.

For example, he said that, "in the old days," a producer may have informed a processing plant that a load of broilers would be delivered on a Thursday, but then would call to say they wouldn't arrive until Friday, for whatever reason.

Back then, the processor could shut down the plant and send employees home early.

Or, if a producer who was to deliver a load of birds on a Monday called and said they would be coming the Friday prior, then the processing plant could operate with overtime and workers would stay later.

That is no longer the case. He said that with the amount of investment in processing facilities, and with employee costs, it is essential that efficiency be key — product must arrive on time, slaughter shackles need to be filled when the plant is running, and overtime for employees reduced or eliminated in order to assure workers regular hours and the company maximum margin potential.

However, he said, "We still use terms to describe each other that are as outdated as the milk can."

He said that those in agriculture have been calling each other names and that some "nasty attitudes" have developed.

"We need to pull the focus away from (that disparagement and inner-bickering) and cooperate so we can survive.

"We've shown our worst side to one another ... to the community, and divided showed we can be used, and we lost a lot of strength.

"We need to get back to basics and pull out what's inside everyone of us," he said, referring to good will, golden rule consideration for neighbors..

Wenger said that everyone can relate to tales of how individuals have been wronged, and then find something to blame it upon, but that won't help keep agriculture strong.

It takes looking beyond personal and immediate needs, and looking to neighbors and beyond.

Furthermore, he said that no matter what the objections, farming operations must be considerate of neighbors.

He told an anecdote of a situation in which a non-farming neighbor became angry with a farmer, and the farmer became angry with the neighbor, without ever speaking to each other.

The farmer wanted to build a facility and the neighbor found out about it and objected.

Instead of asking the farmer what was being planned, how it would operate, what the affects might be, etc., the neighbor instead formed a residential community opposition group and hired an attorney.

The farmer found out about the group and the attorney, and was prepared to hire his own.

At the end of it, neither side even discussed any of it with each other, but immediately sought means to shut each other down.

"We've got to get back to treating our neighbors as ourselves," Wenger said.

"How hard is it to talk to a neighbor once per year, to show them how you do business, your plans, etc." he said.

"And would it really be that hard to call a neighbor before you spread manure? People appreciate that you care a little bit," he said.

There are plenty of stories, he said, of incidents where manure has been spread without regard to outdoor plans of neighbors who live adjacent to farms.

There are also plenty of examples of where even the best of intentions and efforts are snubbed by neighbors.

He said in one incident, a neigh-

Gene Garber, center, chairman of the county ag preserve board, and Karen Weiss, director of land preservation at Lancaster Farmland Trust, talk about protecting Lancaster county farmland with Samuel Stoltzfus, owner of the 100th farm recently preserved by the Trust. Garber is the owner of the first farm preserved by the Trust.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Preserves 100th Farm

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Farmland Trust preserved its 100th Lancaster County farm, announced Trustee Board President John H. Schwartz. Only two other Pennsylvania farmland preservation organizations have reached the 100-farm milestone, and both are governmental organizations.

"Saving 100 farms in just over 10 years is a wonderful accomplishment," Schwartz said. "The Trust has grown from a germinal idea in 1988, when it preserved its first three farms, to today's healthy and thriving organization."

Trust members and friends will celebrate the milestone at a lemonade social at the 100th preserved property next month. The 100-acre organic farm, located in Salisbury Township north of Gap is owned by Samuel Stoltzfus, a New Order Amish farmer.

"I am very happy to have preserved this beautiful and productive farm, forever, with the help of Lancaster Farmland Trust," he said.

Many farmers in the county's Amish and Mennonite communities prefer to preserve farms through the Trust, a nonprofit organization that raises funds among private donors and accepts no government monies.

Farmland Trust Executive Director Thomas D. Stouffer said, "Lots of thanks go to our board, staff, members and volunteers for making this happen in only 10 years. We also want to thank all of the generous foundations and individual donors who have kept our organization financially healthy and strong. We're all working hard to preserve farms for future generations and to keep agriculture successful here."

The Trust's "1998 Annual Report from the President" reported to members that in addition to preserving 12 farms last year, it also broke contribution records, expanded membership, and increased its endowment. With only $600,000, the Trust preserved farms with an easement of more than $2.25 million.

Holstein Association Offers Pedigree Options To Fit Any Need

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Holstein Association USA offers customers three service options for receiving the pedigrees on their animals. Each service option allows the owner to set the criteria they want to receive pedigrees based on.

The first service option, called ID Pedigrees, has the pedigrees generated at the time of identification. The owner can set criteria based on information such as 'P'-Values or dam production which trigger the pedigrees to be sent.

The next service option is based on the TriStar program. This option is called TriStar Lactation Update Pedigrees. The pedigrees are produced at the completion of a lactation recorded under TriStar. Again, the owner decides what criteria for production needs to be met in order to receive a pedigree.

The third service option is Classification Pedigrees. With this option the owner sets a minimum score for a cow that will trigger a pedigree. For example, an owner may decide he or she only wants pedigrees on cows that score over VG 85.

It is important to note in order to use the TriStar or Classification service options the owner must use those programs. These two options are aimed at the breeder who merchandises regularly and needs updated pedigrees as the information is updated.

Jane Jones, Holstein Association's manager of performance Products points out that "these options allow breeders to keep updated pedigrees at the barn for their best animals."

Once the criteria has been set, the pedigrees are automatically generated when the criteria is met. When a customer's needs change, they can have the criteria adjusted to meet those needs.

The Holstein Association also gives customers the option of getting three, four or five-generation pedigrees; three-generation over the Internet or pedigrees sent on disk. Customers can also choose whether or not to have A-Values, genetic values and owner information printed on the pedigrees.

These preferences and options give the customer the flexibility they need and automatically generate pedigrees according to their own criteria.

QUESTION: We have expanded from 75 to 100 cows in the past year and our herd is now made up of a heavy concentration of milking 2-year-olds. How can we assess the performance of the herd when we expect that the Rolling Herd Average will go down with more young cows?

ANSWER: The best way to evaluate herd performance as you go through changes in the herd makeup is to look at the peak performance of various lactation numbers.

Since the herd is heavily influenced by 2-year-old production and many of these animals have not yet finished their first lactation, we need to make comparative evaluations between these cows and the older members of the herd.

First, we need to know where to find the information.

Look at your PA DHIA Herd Summary II and drop down to the third section that lists a "Profile of Cows by Lactation Number."

Move across to nearly midway on the page and look at the column labeled, "Avg. Milk to Peak," where there are four numbers listed.

The third number is peak milk for the three or more lactation cows.

The last number is the average for all cows in the herd.

Now that we have found the information, we can make some evaluations. Cows in their first lactation are peaking at 70 pounds of milk. Cows in second and third lactation are peaking at approximately the same level.

If this were not true, we would need to do the math to determine the average milk at peak for the two catagories.

Older cows are peaking right around 112 pounds.

We expect that within herds, the first lactation peak and that of older cows should be at a 75-percent ratio.

In this herd, we see that this number is much less (70/112 = 62.5%). Using this type of relational evaluation, we see that the first lactation herd is not performing at a level comparative to the older cows under the same management.

When the relational ratio of peak milk between first and later lactations falls below 75 percent, several areas should be looked at.

We want to look at management considerations that affect performance of these new milk cows in the herd. Growth achievement, genetics, and transition periods can affect a young cow's performance well before she has her first calf.

Calving time difficulties may also affect the peak milk performance of these new herd members.

Most of these relationships are well documented, and management practices that address these areas will certainly improve the chances for success with new milking cows.

One area that can influence peak performance and is often overlooked or underplayed in importance is the role of competition with older cows in the herd.

All of the above should be high on our priority list as we raise our future replacements.

Well-managed herds are often caught in this pitfall, especially in freestall setups. Size may not be the problem — these heifers are often very big, but they are still immature.

Competition for feed due to inadequate bunk space or the time allotted for feeding can hold back these younger animals.

Waiting for space where they can't be intimidated by older cows can mean taking one or several meals less a day than they need.

Water availability can also be compromised and when this happens, feed intakes will be less than optimal.

There are no easy answers to solving pitfalls in dairy management. We in DHIA have an advantage because of available information and the capability of using relationship evaluation.

By taking the time to highlight possible areas of concern within this herd, we have a better chance of solving problems quickly.

We now need to measure some heifers to see if we have met their needs to calve at our target age.

If we did, are the heifers making the transition into milk cows with few problems, and good appetites?

If this is so, then we should devise a scheme that will allow for continued growth, along with high production.

I believe that in group situations, we should address the maturity issue and by doing so, close the gap in performance to the expected 75-percent ratio of peak milk from heifers to older cows.

Where this is done, huge differences can be seen not only in the heifer group, but also in future lactations.

Sometimes we may even see that we can overcome small glitches in our heifer management by managing these animals in their own group.

Hoffman Seeds Educates Growers For Next Century

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds, exclusive distributor of Novartis Seeds in the Northeast, conducted a Technology Field Day in conjunction with Novartis Crop Protection to help educate farmers on the latest in crop and seed treatment technologies for corn, soybeans and alfalfa, and to assist growers in incorporating these advances in their own operations.

The Technology Field Day was held in conjunction with Dow Agro Science And AgrEvo at the Hoffman/NK Technology Learning Center in Lancaster County.

"We're workiong not only to educate growers about coping with the challenges in the next century, but how to prosper in this new agricultural environment," said Hoffman Seeds President Fred M. Lepley. "We're providing answers to problems facing farmers today and offering a complete package of technologically-advanced products, including seed, special-added traits and crop protection, that work together to literally provide custom-tailored solutions."

Hoffman Agronomist Mark Mattingly introduced a new Bt corn hybrids with YieldGard protection and confirmed that selecting hybrids for drought and stress tolerance continues to be a focus at Hoffman Seeds.

Mattingly highlighted a new hybrid, N58-D1, which provides excellent control of first and second generation European corn borer and has extremely high yield potential. Also providing excellent corn borer control, N6800Bt produces high quality grain with very heavy test weight. N82-J6 is a first choice hybrid for full-season areas, providing exceptional top-end yield performance and good drought tolerance.

A new generation of alfalfa was also introduced, including Evergreen with Hopper Guard™ potato leaf hopper resistance, a highly adaptive variety scoring a 29 index rating for disease resistance, and Geneva, expected to be Hoffman's top-selling new variety.

Selected for stress tolerance, highlighted soybeans included R366, Hoffman's top-selling Roundup Ready® variety, with superb performance as a full season or double-crop variety and widely adapted from central Pennsylvania to southern Maryland and central Virginia. S42-MI is a new Roundup Ready variety with cyst nematode resistance and excellent early growth. An extremely flexible new Roundup Ready soybean, S34-B2 is adaptable to most soil types, row widths, tillage systems and crop rotations.

Showcasing the latest in biotechnology and its impact on the future of farming, the on-site Novartis Technology Van provided a bank of interactive computers and PCs loaded with a variety of agricultural software for growers to sample, including a real-time data and information program, instant yield and crop mapping, and accounting software especially for the agriculture industry.

"In order to compete worldwide, farmers now have to be extremely technical," said John Flanagan, sales representative for Novartis Crop Protection. "We're providing farmers with an opportunity to fine-tune their total herbicide program with genetically modified plants that are best for both growers and the environment."

Silo Fires Indicate Moisture Too Low

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — The drought has not only caused a lack of grain and forage for livestock producers, but it has also created a very serious situation in which ensiled, salvaged corn is potentially dangerous.

The moisture content of corn cut to be ensiled has to be determined before being blown into a silo. Squeezing it between hands is not reliable.

According to a representative of a silo manufacturing firm, a number of problems have been turning up, and this week there were two local silo fires caused by filling silos with material at too low a moisture level.

He said that the dangers may lie undetected and be deadly.

He said it is apparent that these fires may be happening undetected beneath the surface, and could be deadly for anyone venturing on top of the silage.

With too dry material in a silo, there is also the potential for the formation of deadly silo gasses.

The silo manufacturing representative said anyone uncertain about the conditions of their silo or its contents may call Star Silo at 1-800-431-7709.

State Grange Holds Pre-Convention Conference

bor complained about a farming operation because of flies.

The farmer paid to have the farm sprayed twice, and the neighbor's outside area, twice prior to an announced family reunion.

The family event came and went, but the neighbor still complained that flies had ruined the outing.

A Penn State University expert came to help out, and discovered that the farm was not the cause of the fly problem, and neither was the surrounding community, nor the complaining neighbor's house.

According to Wenger, it turned out that at the outside family reunion picnic, the neighbor complained because eight to 10 flies had been sighted.

The Penn State expert told the residential neightor that they didn't have a fly problem, but you have flies, because flies live in the country.

Even with all that, Wenger said the farmer continues to treat the neighbor as a neighbor, and still talks with the neighbor.

Another problem farming has to face is illegal, but existing local ordinances created without regard to state laws preempting certain restrictive local ordinances.

According to Wenger, local municipalities (there are about 2,600 in Pennsylvania) can pass illegal ordinances, and the only way to get them changed is to use the courts to sue the municipal leaders.

Efforts are underway to get the state to responsibility for ensuring local ordinances are in compliance with state law, but until then, agriculture has to face the fact that as a practical matter in some cases it must be prepared to spend much money to actually achieve rights and protections granted by law.

Wenger said what is a concern is that many of the smaller municipalities with leadership willfully passing illegal laws designed to prevent agricultural operations are in fact subsidized by the state for many essential functions, because those municipalities don't have sufficient tax bases to pay for public services.

He said that for some of these communities, operating with state and federal subsidies has become an accepted and expected way of operation.

Overall, Wenger said that Pennsylvania is a "pretty good" place to farm, but it could get better.

Furthermore, the achievements of Pennsylvania agriculture are great, he said, but the public is unaware.

Strawbridge's Rambouillet Is Supreme Above All Breeds

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Wednesday continued the winning streak for John Strawbridge at the Kutztown Fair. The 15-year-old collected championships with his homebred Rambouillet in the breeding sheep division to clinch the supreme championship title.

Paul Wissinger, Dorset breeder from Sinking Spring and judge for the sheep show, said that although it is difficult to select a supreme champion from many different breeds represented, he couldn't overlook the many outstanding characteristics of the Rambouillet. The heavy-cladded wool sheep flaunts outstanding wool quality and its body is nice and long, ideal for breeding purposes. In addition to the Rambouillet champion, John showed the champion and reserve in Hampshire competition.

John is continuing his deceased father's tradition of being an outstanding sheep breeder. He and his mother Donna Strawbridge show Hampshires and Rambouillets all over the state. They raise 100 head of the two breeds on their Whitehall, Lehigh County farm.

John was also named champion showman not only for sheep but also for swine competition, in which he also took reserve champion market hog and champion spotted swine.

The reserve supreme champion ram was shown by Amanda Miller, Womelsdorf. Her Southdown ewe had won supreme title at other regional fairs. It is one of 20 brood Southdown ewes and five Shropshires that she raises on the family farm. Amanda also showed the Shropshire champion ram and ewe. Derek Redman, Mohnton, showed the reserve champion ram.

In Oxford competition, Jill Neiman, Berks County Lamb and Wool Queen, showed the champion and reserve ewe. Jill was also named champion fitter and reserve champion showman.

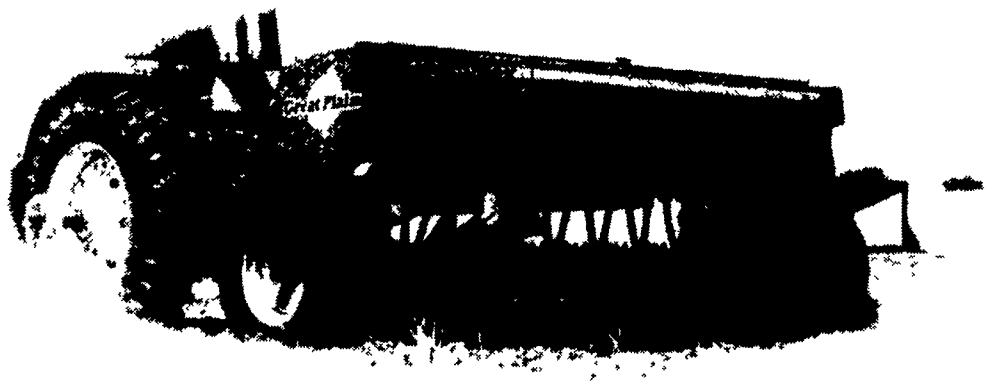
SEE YOU AT THE BUCK!

Dare To Be *Un*conventional



There's Nothing Conventional About Farming Anymore...

...why should you be satisfied with yesterday's conventional-tillage drill? The new 1300 drill is anything but conventional. The 1300 gives you the latest innovations previously available only on big drills - including hydraulic down pressure on the openers, a single-point spring adjustment, and a 3.24 bushel per foot seed box. While the competition is stuck in conventionally tilled fields, the 1300 is tough enough to handle minimum-till. You don't farm by somebody else's rulebook. Break with convention and contact your Great Plains dealer today to learn more about the 1300.

Rural Unity Day

We will be calling for:

1) Immediate passage of adequate emergency funding to address the short-term needs in rural America.

2) Long-term structural changes to the nation's farm program to reinforce the safety net for crop, livestock and dairy producers to keep family farms thriving into the next century.

3) Step up investigations of anti-competitive practices in agricultural markets.

4) Improvements to the nation's crop insurance program to make coverage more affordable and to provide protection to farmers during times of reduced production and low prices.

5) Sensible trade policies and trade agreements that level the playing field for Pennsylvania and U.S. products.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for a cross-section of the community to gather and voice its common concerns about the farm crisis. The impact of the crisis is not limited to the farm for rural main street feels the effects as well," said Junk.

"Action needs to be taken immediately to help end the steep hurdles facing so many in agriculture. This is a chance to send a message to Congress that it must act now."

Throughout the month of August the PA Farmers Union, PA State Grange, and PA Farm Bureau and other farm organizations will be issuing a series of news releases to highlight different aspects of the crisis and how it affects Pennsylvania and rural America.

Peachy Recipes

Make use of in-season fruits. Take advantage of sweet flavorable peaches and pears.

For the sweetest and juiciest fruit, ripen peaches and pears by placing in a loosely-closed paper bag left at room temperature, out of direct sunlight.

Today's recipe selection includes not only cobblers, pies and ice cream for desserts, but nutritious drinks for breakfast, jams for breads, a cold soup, and drinks to cool off.

Indulge.

PEACH SWIRL

1 cup milk
1 cup peaches
Dash salt
2-3 drops almond extract
1 cup peach or vanilla ice cream, serving consistency

Put all ingredients except ice cream into blender container. Cover and process at high speed until smooth. Stop blender. Add ice cream, cover and process until blended. Yield: 2 servings.

PEACH AND PLUM SOUP

2 cups water
1 cup peeled peach slices
1 cup plum slices
½ -cup sugar to taste
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Additional peach slices

In a saucepan, bring water to a boil and simmer fruit slices 15 to 20 minutes or until soft. Whirl in a blender and pour through a wire stainer; discard pulp. Add sugar to taste. Blend cornstarch with small amount of juice; add to fruit mixture and quickly bring to a boil, stirring to prevent lumping. Stir in lemon juice. Chill, covered, and serve with slices of fresh fruit in each serving as garnish:

Variation: Peach soup—Omit plums and use a total of 2 cups peach slices. Add 1 teaspoon almond extract and garnish with slivered almonds or peach slices. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

A contest we might have a chance of winning.

The honors are up for grabs this week, a new addition to the annual Ag Progress Days. Ag Progress Days is a showcase event of Penn State's College of Agriculture, hosted at the Rock Springs research facility on Route 45 south of State College. It runs Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, August 17-19, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with Wednesday hours until 8 p.m.

Ag Progress Days was organized by PSU's ag folks many years ago, as an educational opportunity for farmers to view test sites for new varieties of crops, compare field machines in side-by-side demonstrations, and eyeball the latest in crops and livestock equipment. It also includes horticulture, family living, youth, commodity promotion, and the whole gamut of interesting and informative ag-related displays.

It's a little bit of country fair, machinery expo, field trials, ag promotion, awards presentations, ag organization meetings and just a day of education away from the farm all rolled into one. Years ago, if my aging mind serves me correctly, it was held at Hershey, but now has a permanent location–appropriately–at the University's Rock Springs research site. And, it's free.

Our son lived in an isolated farm tenant home just a mile or so from the research site during most of his PSU collegiate stay several years ago. So attending Ag Progress Days always seems a bit like going home; we became very fond of this beautiful mountain valley and some of its residents during his stay there.

But – back to the winnable contest.

And there are only a few simple rules entrants must abide by: a maximum of two weeds per entrant, limit of one in each of the broadleaf and grasses categories; entries must be grown in Pennsylvania (although we know neighboring states have weeds, too); must be cut off at the soil (no roots). Weeds may be entered in the contest prior to noon on any of three days of the show's running. Winners, measured by height and width when laid flat on the ground, will be determined by PSU agronomists. Prizes will be awarded every day. A weed whacker, maybe?

In tidying the yard and farmstead recently for a family get-together, our daughter lopped off one of our prime contenders as an entry. In this dry year, the seven-foot-tall Lambsquarters stalk snuggled up next to a calf condo and tucked its roots under the end section. No doubt the presence of the resident calf inside kept the soil under the floorless pen at least slightly moist and well-fertilized.

Still, our lush Lambsquarters plant would probably be a piddlin' entry in this contest likely to bring out the very best of Pennsylvania's most durable crop; weeds. Weeds have an innate ability to reach Jolly-Green-Giant proportions, even through the driest soil conditions. When our carefully cultivated acres of corn, soybeans, and hay start turning that sick shade of withering, gray-green from lack of moisture, the weeds continue to thrive.

While Lambsquarters grows with vim and vigor, they find heavy competition for giant weed from Red Root, with it's red-tinted stalk which gets so tough you almost need log chains to yank them out of the garden. Also from towering Poke weeds (which we aim to flatten before the birds leave traces of their telltale purple berries on the clean wash hung out to dry). Not to mention the humongous Ragweeds which spring up overnight to fill the late summer air with hay-fever-irritating pollen.

But our most enduring personal backyard "weeds" are the endless volunteer maple trees which take root in every nook and cranny, then suddenly turn into 12-feet-high garden interlopers. They are unwanted invaders, soak up surrounding moisture, shade out other plants and serve no economic or ornamental value to us.

Would the volunteer maple tree strangling my pussywillow qualify in the broadleaf weed category?

Drought Emergency Can Become Family Emergency

The drought emergency is taking its toll on communities. While many people are asking questions about whether lawns will recover and whether wells and reservoir supplies will last, I'm looking around and asking a different question — a question about people, about families. Families across our state are suffering emotionally and financially from the drought, and there are no easy answers.

While there are no easy answers, having information and some "coping" strategies may help all of us to survive this devastatingly dry weather and its consequences. For farming families and small businesses in the green industry, this drought has heaped additional stress so people who have already been stressed with low commodity prices and development pressures. Whether people call it this or not, families are dealing with loss — loss of income, loss of economic stability, possibly loss of property, loss of pride.

The feelings and reactions that come with loss can take us by surprise. Some people may feel angry, others may feel defeated, some will feel vulnerable, others will feel guilty (second guessing past decisions that would have changed the way this drought affected them).

Whatever the feelings, it is important to accept them. It's OK to feel hopeless or anxious or hateful at times. Those feelings are likely to change as people move through the grieving process with this crisis. Typically people move from shock to a time of fighting or "recoiling" — feeling anger, blaming others. After that stage many experience a time of depression where they are tired, lack motivation to do anything. The good news is that people can come out of that stage to a point of acceptance where they adjust, reorganize, and get a new direction.

If your family is suffering because of the drought or if you have friends who are hurting, here are some suggestions to consider during these tough days without rain.

1. Seek support. Don't shy away from talking about your frustrations. Of course, some people are in the same boat and may be tired of hearing the concerns. Look for people who are one step removed from the situation and talk with them. Talk with a pastor, a neighbor, a relative in another state.

2. Give yourself a mental and physical break from your farm. Being there reminds you of the depressing situation. Go volunteer in the community, visit your grandchildren in another neighborhood, do something that you never had time to do before (because you were always busy 24 hours a day with responsibilities on the farm). You may even want to consider looking for temporary full-time or part-time work. This can be positive for several reasons. It will provide your family with much-needed income, will give you an excuse to get away, and will also give family members a break from one another.

Stress can escalate if the same frustrated people are together all the time. And family specialists know that we often hurt most the people we love most, so giving each other a little space during the week could be good for everyone.

3. Revive a hobby. Do you like to fix cars? Build model trains? Do photography? Play in a community band? Do something fun that distracts you for a few hours.

4. Maintain good health. In the midst of the stress, try to find time to exercise (pounding nails at a local Habitat for Humanity Project or coaching a midget football team combine exercise and volunteering). Also get as much sleep as your body needs.

5. Laugh lots and look for the good...some little kernel of good...in the situation that faces you.

When families take some of these positive steps, they become stronger and stick together in spite of the emotional and financial strains that they are experiencing. Be aware that there will always be "naysayers" who will shoot down your ideas, turn down your offers to listen or help. Don't let that discourage you. Your suggestions may resurface with them a a different time when they are ready to move on or make changes.

As simple as this all sounds, it is really quite difficult to do. Instead of coping positively with stress, some people may withdraw, become violent or escape in drugs and alcohol. If you are tempted to do that or if someone you care about it is choosing that behavior, don't be afraid to seek help either from a county crisis hotline or other local support groups. Don't try to weather this emergency alone.

Glick Family Celebrates Maplehofe's 25th Anniversary

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Milk can be found in thousands of places, but there is only one place in the county to find glass-bottled milk and that's Maplehofe Dairy Farm Store, Quarryville.

The Aaron Glick family started bottling its fresh-on-the-farm milk 25 years ago. Now they're holding an anniversary celebration Aug. 16-28.

While many farm dairies have fallen by the wayside, Maplehofe has survived. Loyal customers buy 3,000 quarts of milk weekly, ice cream, grocery staples, and fresh from the farm produce.

The 170-acre farm where the dairy store is erected was purchased by Aaron and his wife Susie in 1948. The couple started out milking cows. They had seven children In 1960, the Glicks built a chicken house for 12,000 layers. They started selling eggs by using a self-service method. Knowing the farm had a dairy, egg customers often asked if they could also purchase milk.

"That gave dad the idea," said Calvin, one of four sons who now operate the farm and store.

They erected the store, added a new dairy tie-stall barn for 100 cows, and pipeline processing in back of the store for bottling milk.

"We always kept our quality standards higher than those required by law," Calvin said. "We don't add or take out (ingredients)."

Maplehofe, which in German signifies maple trees in the yard, found a marketing niche: Customers who wanted quality milk, freshness, and the assurance of no additives such as Bst hormone were used on the herd.

While other dairies phased out glass bottles, Maplehofe kept them. They also bottled milk in plastic giving customers a choice. They adapted to changing customer habits by processing skim, 2%, and flavored milk, but they continue to offer pasteurized but not homogenized milk in which the cream rises to the top.

One of their most recent additions is vanilla milk, which is proving to be a popular flavor for customers.

"I got the idea from reading an article about ways to encourage children to drink more milk," Calvin said.

In the past year, Maplehofe purchased a stand at Central Market where they sell milk and eggs, three days a week. Calvin's wife Sharon manages the market. To induce customers to "taste the difference," the market stand offers free milk samples including chocolate, vanilla, and strawberry flavors So far, Maplehofe is delighted with customer response, who most often purchase milk in glass jugs.

Many loyal customers insist there is a definite taste difference between milk bottled in glass and that bottled in plastic. For that taste difference, customers are willing to pay a $1.25 deposit on milk jugs and transport the bottles back and forth.

The store offers 32 different flavors of hand-dipped ice cream, which includes such unique flavors as chocolate coconut almond and tiger tracks. Of course, they serve made to order milkshakes, sundaes, and banana splits. Rather than make their own ice cream, Maplehofe has relied upon premium ice cream from Richman's and Turkey Hill.

The store offers typical items found in a convenience store but maintains a fresh-from-the-farm flavor by selling local produce, sliced meats, McCutcheons jellies and jams, and deli items such as specialty-made salads and desserts. Maplehofe also bags and sells bulk food. Recently they added Dutch Maid yogurt, made by an Amish family.

Maplehofe now encompasses three farms totalling 340-acres. They continue to raise 40,000 chickens, small compared to today's large operations, but suitable for their store which markets about 12,000 dozen eggs monthly and wholesales the remainder.

Elvin and Susie, now in their latter 70s, have retired, although Elvin helps out occasionally and continues to own the farms. The four sons own the business including the cows and work together to keep the family operation moving smoothly.

The four brothers have loosely defined areas of expertise. Merle concentrates on the milk processing, Calvin devotes his time to the store and egg grading, and Sam and Elvin focus on the field work.

Maplehofe's employees number 30, which includes store manager Sam Furoches, and an Amish family that milks the dairy herd.

"We have great help. It's the employees that brought us this far," Calvin said.

Aaron and Susie Glick, center, with sons, from left, Sam, Merle, Elvin, and Calvin celebrate Maplehofe's Dairy Farm Store's 25th anniversary. It is the only county farm that continues to market its milk in glass bottles, for the discerning who believe milk tastes better in glass bottles. The farm also uses plastic containers for bottling juice, drink, and milk.

Although Maplehofe includes a dairy store, the Glicks are farmers at heart who find the weather the most frustrating aspect of the whole operation.

The store is located in a rural area of Rt. 222. "It's a bit out of the way, but customers who are concerned about freshness are willing to drive a bit out of the way," Calvin said. Another incentive is that milk is 25 cents a gallon cheaper than that sold in supermarkets.

In addition to anniversary specials from Aug. 16-28, a chicken barbecue, petting zoo, pony rides, clowns, and face painting will be offered Aug. 16 and 21.

Maplehofe is located one mile south of Quarryville on Route 222. Hours are Monday through Saturday, from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. For more information, call (717) 786-3924.

Harmony Miller Is Scholarship Winner

EDGEWATER, Md. — The youngest member of a Harford County, Md. farm family, bound together and to the land by the tragic death of the husband and father in a 1966 harvest-time accident, has been honored by the Maryland Grain Producers Association (MGPA).

Harmony Alida Miller, 17, Darlington, a graduate of high school in Havre de Grace in 1999, is one of two winners in MGPA's annual $2,500 scholarship progarm. She will head off in September to Virginia Tech.

The Miller family, which includes five other siblings, is now headed by Mrs. Jimmie Miller. She assumed the reins when her husband was killed in a farm accident in November 1996.

"My job was the home and the kids," said Mrs. Miller. "His was the farm."

But that all changed in a tragic instant. And the family bonded to preserve the farm and its heritage in memory of their deceased father and husband.

Jimmie Miller (Mrs. Miller continues to use her husband's name) bought the property in 1971. It's a 300-acre-plus dairy, beef cattle, and grain operation. The family also owns Walter's Mill, a grain drying and storage facility, in nearby Forest Hill.

"My husband was going to give up the dairy," Mrs. Miller recalled. "That's why we bought the mill. But we're still milking 60 cows twice a day in an old stanchion barn."

One factor in the Miller family's ability to fulfill its mission is the varied talents of its members. Actually, Harmony will be the third family member to attend Virginia Tech and she's going with a mission ot her own.

A farm operation as diverse as that of the Miller family requires careful management and attention to detail. Harmony intends to major in ag economics, an area of management that her mother admits needs some attention.

Will Harmony bring that knowledge back to the farm?

"You bet," she said, with a bright smile, as if relishing that opportunity.

Harmony was recognized by MGPA at the July 22 Maryland Commodity Classic at the Queen Anne's County 4-H Park. The winner of the second MGPA scholarship was Cory Spies, whose family farms on Three Bridges Branch Road near Eston in Talbot County. He was unable to attend the event.

Harmony Miller and her mother have shared tough times but now they celebrate a victory.

Summer Intern

If I could offer you just one piece of advice that would help to guide you through life's perils it would be this: Never get in the way of children and candy. Candy seems to have this unexplained effect on children causing them to act like wild animals who have not eaten in the last 30 days.

You may ask how I came upon this valuable pearl of wisdom, as well you should. After all not everyone has looked into the face of a candy-crazed child and lived to tell about it. I, however, am one of the lucky ones. I am a member of one of the toughest groups around. The few, the proud, the summer assistants.

My job as summer assistant is one of the toughest positions that I have ever held. It requires me to use all of my existing skills as well as skills I never knew I possessed, such as face painting. Oh sure, it may sound like a piece of cake but believe me it's constant mishmash of hard work and dedication. No where is this more evident than at the Lancaster County 4-H Fair. The fair is the culmination of my job as summer assistant, the "Big Test" if you will. This is the event that will push me to my limits and test all of my skills.

One of the biggest events that take place during fair week is "Tent City". Taking place on the lst day of the fair, tent city is an annual camp out that occurs every year at the 4-H Fair. 4-H'ers bring a tent and spend the night at the fair playing games and having fun until midnight, which is when they go to bed. The evening was organized by Katina Showman and my fellow summer assistant Paula Marshall. In order to keep the kids entertained Paula had to come up with various outdoor games, which the children could play. The finale of the evenings' activities was to be the breaking of a piñata filled to the top with candy. This seemed like a nice calm way to end the evening, but as I would soon discover no evening can be calm when you mix children with candy.

Paula had purchased a large smiley face piñata for this year's fair and I must admit that it did look quite tranquil suspended in the air, no knowing that impending doom was coming closer and closer. Around 11:30 Katina got the kids together and announced that it was time to come inside to break the piñata. Usually getting 4-H'ers to come inside is like pulling teeth, since they would rather stay outside and play. That was not the case on this particular evening, as soon as they heard the words, "break the piñata," they came into the building in record time. Eyes gleaming they stared at the sacrificial piñata, calculating in their minds just how much candy it could hold. As Katina explained the rules of the game an erie silence fell over the group, it seemed everyone was forming plans on how to get the most candy.

The rules of the game were really quite simple. One person would swing at a time and while that person was swinging everyone must stay behind the line to ensure that no one gets hurt. After the piñata was broken the children were to wait for our signal to tell them that they could retrieve the candy. It seemed that everyone understood the directions so without further delay our first 4-H'er was blindfolded and given a chance to whack the unsuspecting piñata. Breaking a piñata takes time since not all of the swings made contact and most of the time the ones that do aren't strong enough. So it ended up taking a little while to weaken the piñata to the point of breaking. The piñata was just about ready to burst, it had sustained massive blows on both sides and was now cracking at the bottom, surely the next hit would do it in. This was not to be the case however, the next hit only knocked out some of the candy but also managed to knock down the entire piñata, leaving us with no way to hang it back up. So with no other options Paula decided to just pour the candy on to the floor and let the children collect it that way. This seemed to be safer anyway since there was no chance of someone being hit with a stick of flying candy. Now the key phrase to remember her is, "seemed to be a better idea."

The candy was now lying on the floor in front of the children, just ready for the taking. Following the rules every child was waiting for the signal to go. I was standing on the sidelines monitoring the children and thought that since all of the candy was out it would be safe to let the children advance, and it would have been except for one key element. These children no longer were sane individuals, they had turned in to candy-craving 4-H'ers and nothing was going to stop them from getting their sweets. I had no idea just how serious these children were until I shouted out the magic work: "Go!" Instantly the room was filled with dust as 21 4-H'ers threw themselves on the floor in a mad frenzy to grab as much candy as possible. It was an experience I will never forget.

After the dust had settled the 4-H'ers returned to their normal selves, only now they were all clutching bags full of candy, protecting them with their very lives. I must say that once again 4-H has provided me with experiences that I could never find anywhere else. Okay, so maybe I could witness something like this in the wild but who would want to travel that far?

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Perhaps you heard about the people who were hospitalized after eating undercooked hamburgers at a restaurant or school that contained E. coli bacteria. There also has been serious food-related E. coli outbreaks across the United States and in Canada, a number of nursing home residents have died from E. coli contaminated food.

People ask if this is the same E. coli bacteria we've always considered a harmless dweller in the intestinal tract? The answer is yes — there are types of E. coli that live peacefully in the human intestine. They keep the growth of more harmful organisms in check and even produce some B vitamins for us.

But there are other types of E. coli that cause traveler's diarrhea and more serious diarrhea in young children, particularly in the Third World countries. And there's this other villain — E. coli 0157:H7 that's been causing a lot of trouble.

This bacteria was first identified by scientists in the early 1980s when illness with bloody stools was reported in people who'd eaten undercooked hamburgers from some fast food outlets, this new bacterial strain has emerged as even more troublesome than some experts first thought.

E. coli - 0157:H7 is capable of causing more serious disease than most foodborne bacteria and has caused fatalities in the elderly. In the very young, the elderly and the immune deficient, the complications of infection with E. coli can be quite serious.

People often ask how they get the E. coli infections. Since thorough cooking kills this bacteria, most cases have involved people eating undercooked ground beef or drinking unpasteurized milk. Bacteria are destroyed by high heat in normal pasteurization.

But when these E. coli bacteria are consumed in food that hasn't been properly cooked or pasteurized, getting the illness is easy — roughly 30 to 60 percent of those exposed get sick.

Symptoms like severe abdominal cramps, diarrhea which is often bloody, nausea, vomiting and a low fever may develop three to four days after eating contaminated food. The disease can last up to 10 days and because of its severity often requires hospitalization.

The bacteria can travel through animal-to-animal, meat animal-to-human and human-to-human contacts. Therefore people can get sick from contaminated raw food of animal origin or, it seems likely, when infected food handlers contaminate food eaten raw or undercooked.

While the bad news is that E. coli causes food poisoning with symptoms ranging from acute discomfort and diarrhea to kidney failure and death, the good news is that you can protect yourself.

The bacteria is killed by thorough cooking. So don't ear rare-in-the-middle meats when you're out, and cook and handle food carefully at home. This advice is critically important for the young, the elderly or anyone with a weakened immune system.

Protect Yourself at Home By Observing These Rules:

1. Never drink raw milk. Use pasteurized milk.

2. After shopping, quickly freeze or refrigerate perishable foods.

3. Use refrigerated ground meat and patties in three to four days; frozen meat and patties in three to 4 months.

4. Wash your hands, utensils and work area with hot, soapy water after contact with raw meat and meat patties.

5. Cook meat and patties until very hot. The center should be gray or brown. Juices should run clear with no trace of pink. All meat, poultry and fish should be well cooked.

6. Serve cooked food with clean plates and utensils.

7. Check package directions. You might need to pre-heat the oven or grill. Cook for required time period. Cook covered if directions call for that.

8. Microwave carefully. If your oven is a lower wattage than what is shown in the instructions, you'll need to cook food longer or at a higher setting. Rotate food for even cooking. Let food stand outside the oven after cooking if so directed. The food will finish cooking as it stands.

9. Never thaw food on the counter or let it sit out of the refrigerator over two hours!

Examine Blooming Income Source

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers in search of an alternative crop or a blooming source of income can discover how to start a cut-flower farming operation by visiting Ag Progress Days, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Aug. 17-19.

Experts from the college's department of horticulture and Penn State Cooperative Extension will be on hand at the Cut-Flower Demonstration/Ask The Experts tent on East 7th St. to answer questions and distribute literature on cut-flower operations. The event is held at the university's Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, near State College.

"Cut flowers really have piqued the interest of farmers and other businessmen as a cash crop that can be sold at farmer's markets and other outlets," says Robert Berghage, assistant professor of horticulture. "The cash return on a small, well-managed plot of flowers is a lot more than you would get from an acre of corn."

The staff also will hold flower arranging demonstrations using flowers from the demonstration plots at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily in the tent.

Berghage says the demonstration area will showcase more than 90 flower varieties, including zinnias, asters, celosia, sunflowers, strawflowers and other annuals, as well as several varieties of woody plants used in the cut-flower market. "We also will display some unique flower varieties that are not widely known on the market," Berghage says.

Visitors can get fact sheets and information on business opportunities, weed control, budgeting and crop handling.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free from July 12 to August 19 or visit the Ag Progress Days site on the World Wide Web at http://apd.cas.psu.edu.

Youth Grange Members Select New Ambassadors

HOWARD (Centre Co.) – Many of the past Youth Ambassadors have described the experience as being one of the best in their lives.

If that is the case, then Ann Kieffer of Berks County and William Schlemmer Jr. of Lawrence County can look forward to some good times in the coming year.

Kieffer of Marion Grange and Schlemmer of East New Castle Grange were recently selected the 1999-2000 Youth Ambassadors during Youth Camp activities at Camp Sylvan Hills in Centre County.

Both were left nearly speechless after the announcement was made.

"Unbelievable," Schlemmer, 20, the son of William and Rosemarie Schlemmer, New Castle, said. "I have been in grange for 15 years and moving up the ladder. I guess this is another step up the ladder."

Kieffer, 17, the daughter of Mark and Debra Kieffer, Bethel, was named ambassador only two years after serving as Junior Princess.

While both admit that the position is too new for them to know what to expect, they anxiously anticipate serving the Grange as representatives of the Youth Department.

In the coming year, they will represent the Grange at the state convention in Allentown this October, the 2000 Pennsylvania Farm Show, the 2000 royalty trip and the National Grange Session in Fresno, California next fall.

"I'm glad I'm going to be able to contribute to the Grange," said Schlemmer, who is employed at Big K Liquidators as a warehouse worker. "I want to go to as many Grange meetings and fairs as possible to talk Grange."

Although she has no concrete plans, Kieffer said it would be a great idea to incorporate a program to guide Junior members as they make the transition to the Youth level.

"If Juniors don't take part immediately at the next level," Kieffer said, "it seems like they lose interest and then it (their interest) dies out."

Kieffer, who will be a senior at Tulpehocken High School this fall, says she would like to pursue a career as a high school music teacher.

She plans to major in Music Education this fall at a campus close to home including either Lebanon Valley or Messiah colleges.

Outside the Grange, Kieffer enjoys playing the piano, flute and piccolo, and performing in the school chorus and show choir. She is also active in her church's youth group, choir and Worship Committee.

Schlemmer's hobbies include playing sports, especially softball, basketball and football and fishing.

First runners-up in the Youth Ambassador Court were: Jesica Blair, Perry Valley Grange, Perry County, and Jeremiah Wilmer of East New Castle in Lawrence County.

Other court members included: Paul Elliott of Hookstown Grange, Beaver County; Derek Schroeder, Virginville Grange, Berks County; Brad Van Tassel, Big Beaver Grange, Lawrence County; Monica Shaffer, Allegheny Grange, Lycoming County; Heather Tau, Hayfield Grange, Crawford County; and Stephanie Harshberger, Perry Valley Grange, Perry County.

WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK
Why do killdeers act hurt?
Killdeers are pretty, dove-sized birds with a white chest, tannish-brown back and wings, and two bands of black on their neck — one that goes all the way around and one that goes half way around.
Because killdeers make their nests along the banks of shores or rivers, or on the ground in fields, meadows and pastures, their young are easy targets for hungry animals.
The protective parents keep a watchful eye out for danger, though. If it sees a predator, one parent plays a trick on the animal by acting hurt. In the process, the parent killdeer lures the animal away from the nest of young birds. People who study birds call this trickery feigning. (Say FAIN-ing.)
Here's what happens: Say Papa Killdeer sees a hungry fox heading towards the family nest. The bird attracts the attention of the fox by moving away from the nest. (Mama Killdeer takes over protecting the eggs or young while the father is away. And, the father stays if the mother is luring the animals away). The killdeer holds one wing or its tail away from its body as if it were broken and continues to flutter away from the nest. The fox, seeing what it thinks is an easy meal, follows the Papa bird.
The killdeer keeps up the act until it has led the fox a safe distance away. Then, much to the fox's dismay, the bird flies out of the fox's reach — and back home to resume protecting the family nest.
Scientifically yours,

Junior Grangers Crown New Royalty At State Gathering

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – For only the second time this decade, half of the Grange Junior and Youth Royalty are related.

When Andrew Kieffer of Marion Junior Grange, Berks County, was named Prince at Junior Camp, it was the first time siblings have been together since Amy and Beth Marshall were Youth Ambassador and Junior Princess, respectively in 1992.

"It does feel different since I know her, but maybe it will help those who know my sister remember me a little bit more" said Andrew, 14, the son of Mark and Debra Kieffer.

Had Andrew not been named Prince, then there may have been a brother/sister combination as the Junior royalty.

While Rebecca Vonada, 14, of Logan Junior Grange, Centre County, was being selected as Junior Princess, her brother, Matthew, was first runner-up. Vonada, Spring Mills, who is Master in her Junior Grange, had mixed feelings when her name was announced.

"I was kind of shocked and kind of scared," Vonada said. "I was shocked because I got it, and scared because I thought of the coming year and all that I have to do as princess."

In addition to speaking at Subordinate and Pomona meetings, both will travel to the state session this fall in Allentown, the 2000 Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg, and the 1999 National Grange Session in Portland, Maine, this fall.

During their visits to Grange functions, the two will have plenty to chat about since they share an interest in building model rockets.

Although it is only a hobby for Kieffer, who enters the 9th trade at Tulpehocken High School this fall, Vonada, a 10th grade student at Penns Valley Area High School, would like a career in astronomy.

"I would like to go to Mars someday or at least be involved in sending stuff there, said Vonada, who also enjoys chemistry and bike riding.

Her other interests include 4-H, basketball, track, soccer, church choir, church youth group and concert band.

Kieffer enjoys music including jazz band, school chorus, show choir, church choir and church youth group. Other interests are playing baseball and soccer and collecting cards.

The Pennsylvania State Grange's Junior program is for children ages 5-14 with campers being between the age of 10-14. The Junior Grange program is a stepping stone to the Grange's youth program, and emphasizes teaching children about stewardship, leadership and community service in a relaxed and entertaining environment.

Best In The State Proclaimed At Fashion Revue

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Fifty-eight regional finalists modeled outfits constructed as part of their 4-H projects, Wednesday, July 28, at the Eisenhower Auditorium on Penn State's University Park Campus.

Special honors went to 10 contestants based on their exceptional construction skill, fit, appropriateness, modeling, and poise.

Tanisha Seibert, 18, daughter of Edward and Barbara Seibert of Hershey, received the top score and was selected to participate in the 1999 national 4-H Fashion Revue at the National 4-H Congress to be held in Atlanta, Georgia, November 27-December 3. She made and modeled a plum satin and chiffon off-the-shoulder gown of her own design.

Melanie Snyder, 15, also modeled a formal gown of navy and cream crepe. She is the daughter of Gary and Vickie Snyder of Halifax.

Those modeling wool suits were, Erin Lichtenwalner, 15, daughter of Tim and Karen Lichtenwalner of Coplay; Aleecha Jones, 15, daughter of Tom and Karen Jones of Loysberg; and Natalie Foxwell, 16, daughter of Gary and Bonnie Foxwell of Meyersdale. Alycia Joseph, 14, made a wool French country outfit inspired by one she had seen in an issue of Victoria Magazine. She is the daughter of William and Sandra Joseph of Darlington.

Stephanie Hale, 15, daughter of David and Loren Johnson of Saltsburg, made and modeled a suite with a flocked floral design and velvet lapels. She trimmed a hat with matching fabric. Her parents are Richard and Oralee Folk of Bernville.

A sky blue sweater set and black stretch capri pants were modeled by Patricia Grieggs, 14, daughter of Joseph ad Rosemary Grieggs of Harrisburg.

Allison Reynolds, 14, modeled a turquoise, white and pink summer suite with matching shell. She is the daughter of James and Karen Reynolds of Irwin.

Sporting a western flare long black duster coat, vest, and button front band collar shirt, was Maththew Reichard, the only boy in this year's state fashion revue. He is 13 and the son of Jesse and Tonya Reichard of Waynesboro. He found his pattern through the Internet.

There were many other exceptional garments including antebellum gowns that were modeled at the revue. Next year's state revue will be held in Eisenhower Auditorium, August 2.

4-H Fair Opens Lancaster County Fair Season

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.) — While Sarah Boyd represented 4-H in Poland, her 4-H projects were racking up a lot of wins.

At the Lancaster County 4-H Fair at Lampeter last week, Sarah's lamb, Latrell, took champion market lamb honors after it was shown by Tiffany Dean.

According to Sarah's parents' Kerry and Deb Boyd, the lamb had been purchased from B&B, Ohio, sight unseen, the same as last year. Both times, Sarah clinched the market lamb title at the 4-H Fair.

After 14 years of showing sheep, with 11 of those years in 4-H, Travis Donough, in his final year of 4-H competition, claimed the reserve market lamb title.

The win was triumphant, because Anastasia is a bred and owned lamb that competed against many purchased lambs from the Midwest. Judge Rod Crome, Md., commented on the thick-topped, large hind saddle, and smooth head of the homebred champion.

Although a veteran winner over the years in other county competitions, Donough of Manheim said, "It's the first time I won here."

After clinching the title, Donough had to rush back to Penn State's main campus, where he is taking summer classes. He will be a full-time ag-education student there in the fall. Donough had postponed college for a year to devote his efforts to serving as a state FFA officer.

In breeding sheep competition, Katrina Frey showed a Suffolk Breezeview 950 to take supreme champion breeding sheep. With seven Southdowns from her breeding flock of 18, Stephanie Kauffman, 11, was named bred and owned champion.

The supreme breeding sheep is the same one that Katrina, 9, had shown to win the Pennsylvania Junior Show. Katrina, daughter of Fritz and Nancy Frey, lives in Quarryville.

4-H'er Attends Citizenship Washington Focus

Emily Swanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Swanson of Russell, participated in the 4-H Citizenship Washington Focus week-long program at the National 4-H Center near Washington, D.C., July 11-17.

Emily was one of 14 Pennsylvania teens attending with six other states. The Pennsylvania delegation met with Rep. John Peterson and viewed the House and Senate in action.

Workshops were held to discuss issues affecting families and world economics. Emily participated in debates of lowering voting age. She also served on the career committee for the Washington Focus event. Other workshops studied the legislation process at national level.

Funding for the program was provided by the Defrees Family Foundation and Warren County 4-H Development Council. For information about the citizenship program and other 4-H programs, contact the 4-H office at (814) 563-9388.

Lamb, Wool Queen: Keen On Showmanship Tips

ANDY ANDREWS

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Jill Neiman enjoys getting ready for shows.

In her seven years as a member of the Berks County 4-H Sheep and Lamb Club, Jill has learned to share what she knows about preparing for fitting and showmanship, in addition to market contests for her livestock.

Her experience recently netted her a tiara as Berks County Lamb and Wool Queen during the Kutztown Fair.

Jill, 15, daughter of Leon and Linda Neiman, Fleetwood, was readying her Oxford yearling ewe, "Evita," for the showmanship and fitting contest at the fair Tuesday. Jill nicknamed the yearling in honor of the movie made to showcase the talents of the box-office and music video star, Madonna.

Jill, a sophomore at Oley Valley High School, said she enjoys "helping the general public understand more about sheep and the sheep industry, and to promote wool."

Jill has completed a wide variety of 4-H projects, which she also completes for FFA.

Jill said she enjoys providing tips for other 4-H'ers to follow to give them the best chances in competition. She exhibits at the roundups in September and shows at the Schuylkill County Fair, Kutztown, Allentown, Oley, and, when held, the Reading Fair.

Jill also is a member of her high school debate team, throws shotput and discus in the spring, and shows other animals at the fair, including dairy, beef, and goats.

"I really love the animals," Jill said.

At the same time she enjoys fielding questions about sheep breeding (she maintains about seven Oxford ewes at home). She answers the "weirdest questions," she said, from the public at the Allentown Fair at the end of August. One person thought a cow was a donkey.

Jill enjoys raising Oxford sheep because she is fond of the "pompadour" on the top of the sheep's head. "It looks cute," she said. No other breed has the majestic top like the Oxford.

But Jill still shows goats, a beef heifer, a steer, and some dairy cows, of which she began her 4-H experience. She takes her animals to all the fairs.

Previously I mentioned that our family of 28 members was going to spend a week together in Virginia in a large rented house. This vacation never materialized for us.

The reason being that my husband had open heart surgery. This was a shock to all of us as it was discovered to be necessary when he took tests prior to a total hip replacement operation. He had a triple bypass which was not the operation that we expected.

He came through the surgery all right but it will be a long recovery period. Doctor appointment after doctor appointment. Then weeks of rehabilitation at the "Cardiac Rehab Center" in Lancaster.

During these harrowing weeks, we had the full support of our children. Our daughter and her family drove through the night from Indiana in order to be with me during the operation. Our son also drove up from Virginia to see his father. Then our daughter from Georgia was here for two days and lectured us on what kind of food we should be eating.

Meanwhile the grandchildren had a wonderful time fishing for crabs with chicken legs. They got to ride on the pontoon boat and go to an amusement park too. Each family was assigned one day to cook the meals.

In situations like this one must look for the "good." The children had already planned to have off from work and so were free to travel. Also, the drought has dried up our gardens and so there is no produce to can or freeze. We'll have to use our previous year's supply.

Our lives will certainly be changed!

Milton Hershey School's agricultural and environmental education students recently participated in the "Good Day New York" morning television show, which was broadcast live from HERSHEYPARK®. Funk Sisters Take Top Honors In Lead Line Competition

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.) — Temperatures in the 90s isn't conducive to wearing wool, but that's exactly what eight contestants needed to do during the annual lead line competition held at the 4-H Fair, Lampeter, last week.

The Lead Line competition is a fashion show of sorts that not only shows off wool fabric's beauty and versatility but also stylish sheep groomed to their wooly best.

No matter how stylishly groomed, a stubborn lamb who refuses to cooperate can be the downfall of a potential winner. That's because contestants are scored on their ability to control their lambs in the show ring.

Some contestants were sweating profusely and some of the wooly participants did not sound too happy either as they paraded around the show ring. But two sisters from Millersville kept their cool and clinched the top spots in both junior and senior competition.

"I can't believe I won because I didn't like my outfit this year," said Ashley, a veteran participant.

What matters is that the judges did like her outfit. The outfits are judged not only for wool content and fashion but for how appropriate in fit and appearance they are to the participants.

Kathy, 18 years old and from Mount Joy, modeled wool cuff trousers that were fully-lined, a turtleneck, and a sweater designed in navy blue and shades of brown.

Third place went to Bobbi Nicole Bentzel, 14, and her Shropshire, Marble. Bobbie coordinated black wool pants with a gray wool sweater and beret.

Third place in the junior division went to Rachel Musser, 10, Mount Joy. Rachel wore a dark green jumper with a matching scrunchie in her hair. Her Hampshire crossbred lamb sported a matching scarf.

To showcase the convenience of home milk delivery, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) arranged for News 12 New Jersey—the statewide cable station—to accompany a Welsh Farms' driver on his morning deliveries in March. During the 6-9 a.m. newscast, three different segments aired, highlighting the variety of available products (including milk, butter, and cottage cheese), training the reporter to be a milkman and interviewing a home delivery customer. A summary piece of the morning's activities also ran on the noon news and throughout the afternoon segments.

4-H HAPPENINGS

East Rush 4-H Club

The East Rush 4-H Club held its third meeting this year at the East Rush Methodist Church.

Old business included a report by Susquehanna County Shooting Sports Leader, Don Hardic, about the 4-H Leaders' Banquet on April 21. He told about certain leaders who received five-year pins, and about Dave Quick, who received his 35-year pin and is suffering from a tumor. He started the East Rush 4-H Club. Don Hardic said the banquet went very well.

The dues were then collected. After, the club discussed the breakfast and lunch it would provide for the 4-H Horse Roundup July 24.

Members discussed the Fairgrounds Beautification project. Leaders Marie and Don Hardic told about the club's plot last year that won third place. The club voted to decide whether it would try it again this year. The vote was a unanimous "yes." The club decided to have a committee in charge of it, and the Guitons were elected to be chairmen. They needed to have a report for next meeting.

East Rush

The East Rush 4-H Club held its fourth meeting at the East Rush Methodist Church.

Leader Marie Hardie passed out last year's blue ribbon pins to the people who were absent the last meeting. President Ben Hardic moved to nominate Alyssa Jones as treasurer. Wyatt Adams seconded the motion. There were no other nominees. The motion was unanimously approved.

Ben read the Life Skills of the Month, with the Task being the ability to meet deadlines and due dates. The Overall Life Skill was accepting responsibility and the Underlying Life Skill was keeping records and time management.

After adjournment, the club leader passed out books and the members enjoyed refreshments after singing grace.

This cow goes to town. Alla-Valley Encore Chattahoochie visited several King's Supermarkets in New Jersey during the June is Dairy Month campaign sponsored by Farmland Dairies. Her presence in front of a city store is a real attention grabber and many photos are snapped. More than 700 adults and children heard about the 86-point Encore cow that has been All-New Jersey as a senior calf, senior yearling, and the 1998 Futurity winner. Phyllis Semanchik, Andover, is the cow's owner and has participated in the Kings-Farmland venture for 12 years.

4-H Pals Of Newtown Club Wins National Award For Community Service Work

The 4-H Pals of Newtown Club won a national award in the 26th annual search for the country's best community service projects by young Americans. The 4-H Pals adopted a group home of developmentally disabled women, who they visit on a regular basis. Their efforts won them high honors in the "1999 Colgate Youth for America" Campaign.

The announcement was made recently in New York by TV and screen stars Rebecca Gayheart, Ashton Kutcher, Monica Keena, and Omar Epps, celebrity members of this year's judging panel for the program which encourages community responsibility in young people.

Club leader Lisa Ashbaugh said, "Our community service work focuses on breaking down the NIMBY (not In My Back Yard) phenomena by role modeling the acceptance of all people, including the disabled, in our community."

For their efforts, the 4-H Pals of Newtown Club was voted a $100 fourth prize in the 26th anniversary Colgate Youth for America campaign. The 4-H Pals are planning a summer picnic at Core Creek Park with their friends from the group home to celebrate.

The 4-H Pals of Newtown Club, which includes six fourth and fifth graders in the Newtown grant community, focus on cooking, leadership, and community service projects. The girls have completed a fire safety and numerous cooking projects this year. They have participated in two events at the Bucks County Cooperative Extension's spring round up and are preparing for their Grange Fair exhibits in mid-August

The 4-H Pals also adopted a group home of developmentally disabled woman about 18 months ago and visit them on a quarterly basis. The 4-H Pals have provided them with Easter baskets, planted flowers in their garden, holiday presents, as well as baked lots of goodies for them, utilizing their newly formed cooking skills to make treats for their social outings together

U.S. clubs and troops of six national youth organizations (Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire, Girls Incorporated, 4-H, and Boys and Girls Clubs) are invited to enter their best community service projects in this annual Colgate campaign Cash grants are awarded for the best projects in each of the organizations.

To date, Colgate-Palmolive Company has awarded more than $5.5 million to America's young people through "Youth for America." The program has been honored by the White House under five different administrations, has received a Freedoms Foundation Award, and is praised each year by members of Congress and countless governors and mayors throughout the nation.

In discussing the 26th annual campaign, Jennifer Marcus Barbara, the program's executive director, commented, "Youth for America puts special young people in the spotlight for their positive efforts in improving their world. Today, perhaps more than ever, we need to be reminded of the caring attitude of most of our children. Our thanks and admiration go to these kids with the ingenuity and ambition to meet and overcome some of the tough challenges they and their community face today."

Panic Could Be Biggest Y2K Threat

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As people's interest in what might happen on the first day of 2000 grows, it's important not to get distracted by the "hype," said a consumer scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Consumers should prepare for the year 2000 as if preparing to a winter storm or any other emergency," said Cathy Bowen, assistant professor of agricultural and extension education. "If you prepare by controlling things that you can, there's no reason to panic. But don't wait until December to prepare—you can start now by doing a little every month."

Bowen suggests asking yourself what you'd need if there were minor disruptions in services used daily. What backup plan can you rely on for food, clothing, shelter and minor medical needs? "The 'Year 2000 marketing event' is our chance to educate and remind people that basic household emergency preparations should be in place all the time," she said. "but this year, we have people's attention."

By now, most consumers probably have heard of the "millennium bug." When computers were first built, Bowen explains, computer programmers—to save precious memory space—used two numbers instead of four to indicate the year. When the year 2000 arrives, this shortcut might cause some computers to perform as if "00" means "1900." Even if you don't own a personal computer, your daily routine could be upset because services that are operated by, or depend on computers, such as water, electricity and our food supply system, could malfunction," she said.

Bowen also warns consumers to beware of con artists. "Unscrupulous people are bound to try to make money from someone's fear or lack of knowledge," she said. "Stay alert. If someone ask you for financial information like bank account or credit card numbers, hang up or walk away. Keep in mind the old saying, 'If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is."

To prepare for the year 2000 and beyond, Bowen offers some suggestions that are based on standard emergency preparations or sound household management practices:

Food. Keep foods on hand that need minimal preparation and no refrigeration. "Canned and dried foods are good choices," she said. "Determine what you'd need for two weeks, then rotate foods by eating from the emergency supply and replacing what you use. This will keep your emergency supply fresh.

Bowen suggests buying items in one- or two-use sizes so you don't have to store opened foods. "Without electricity, food can be heated with propane or kerosene stoves, outdoor grilles, candle warmers, Sterno or a small campfire," she said.

Water. Store a three-day to two-week supply of water for each family member, Bowen said. "A gallon of water per person, per day is the general recommendation. Keep in mind your normal daily consumption. Clean plastic soft drink containers (2 litre/2 quart) are good choices for storing daily water that are readily available in most areas."

People with special needs. Elderly people might need special foods or items such as denture care products, Bowen says. Infants probably will need special foods and items such as disposable bottle liners and disposable diapers. Anyone with a chronic health problem should have a two-week supply of medicines on hand, such as inhalers for asthma patients or insulin for diabetics. Pets also need food and water, litter, bedding and other routine items.

Financial matters. Bowen suggests consumers keep paper copies of statements from banks, investments and creditors, and—over a few months—stash just enough cash prior to Dec. 1 to cover expenses for two weeks. It's never a good idea to have large amounts of cash at home or in your wallet or purse. "Before and after Jan. 1, 2000, you might want to get a copy of your credit report from a credit bureau and personal earnings and credit statement from Social Security," she says.

Credit bureau reports may be obtained for about $8 from one of the major credit bureaus, such as Experian (888-397-3742, http://www.experian.com); Equifax (800-685-1111, http://www.equifax.com); or Transunion (800-888-4213, http://www.tuc.com). The Social Security Administration can be reached at (800) 772-1213, or through their Web site at http://www.ssa.gov.

First aid and medical considerations. Families should have a basic first aid kit and printed copies of medical information and records for each family member. "If a family member is on a life-support system that requires electricity, you should register with your local emergency management agency," she said.

For more information about Y2K, including a detailed checklist for emergencies, see the publication "Consumers and the Year 2000 (Y2K)." Single copies are available free of charge from your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

The publication also is available on the World Wide Web at http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/CASDEPT/familyliving/cb/Y2K.pdf.

"If we take precautions beforehand, whatever happens is going to be a lot easier for our families and communities," she adds. "In early 2000, we may be sitting back, relaxing—laughing and relieved— but well prepared for any emergency."

POURED SOLID CONCRETE
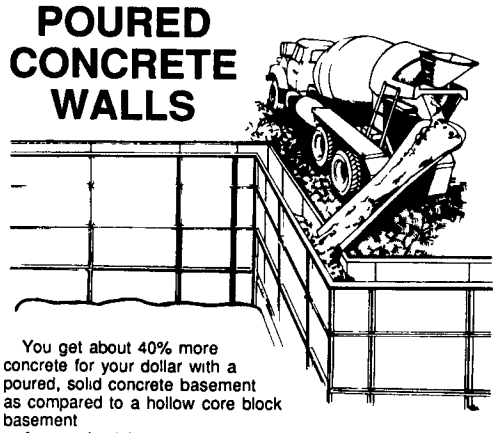
START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement
A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!
This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration
Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:
- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

Accentuate The Positive

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Are we raising a generation of children fraught with food worries?

Obesity as well as the eating disorders anorexia nervosa and bulimia are on the rise among children. At one time, eating disorders were thought to affect primarily pre-teen and teenage girls in upper socioeconomic groups. Currently, eating disorders are increasingly appearing in younger children and boys, and have infiltrated all socioeconomic groups.

Julie O'Toole, MD, and Oregon pediatrician, sees this alarming trend as a side effect of modern society. One of the factors contributing to this is that girls and boys today are under terrific pressures to be thin. There is an obsession that a single body type is appropriate for all. Fatness is associated with a lack of moral fiber—those who are fat are considered disgusting, weak, and without will. While there is a wide variety of body types and growth patterns among children, kids don't usually see a wide variety of shapes and sizes depicted in magazines or television.

Parents also need to be careful with the messages they are sending to their children. Parents send strong messages to their children when they constantly complain about their bodies, discuss diets, obsess over the fat, calorie, and sugar content of food. Parents have a powerful influence on their child's self-esteem and body image. The most important impression made on a young child's sense of self comes from you, the parent. Any griping you do about your size or shape can ultimately influence your child's body image.

The following are seven ways to accentuate the positive from Joan Chrisler, Ph.D., a professor of psychology at Connecticut

College.

1. Don't ask! "Do I look fat in this outfit?" This question can cause children to become anxious about their own shape and size. It would be okay to say, "Do you like the color of my dress?" Clothing should be seen as fun and functional, not as a source of anxiety.

2. Don't criticize your own figure. A healthy body image is not just about appearance. Parents need to encourage their children to value their talents and abilities rather than to be consumed with their looks.

3. Don't compare yourself with other people in a negative way. This may give your child the idea that you fall short of some ideal. To help improve your child's sense of self-worth, point out diverse images of beauty, and stress that inner beauty is even more important.

4. Don't talk about your weight. Hearing about how hard it is for you to lose weight can plant the seed for your own child's obsession with the scale. If you are out and see a friend who has lost weight, don't say, "You look great, did you lose weight?" This implies that looking good depends on weight loss. All you have to say is, "You look terrific!"

5. Don't brush off compliments. The lesson of self-depreciation is too easy to learn. If you see yourself as unworthy your child will pick up on this. Next time someone pays you a compliment say "Thank you," and smile.

6. Don't describe food in terms of being bad for you. By labeling doughnuts and ice cream as bad, you make it harder for your child to learn to enjoy treats in moderation.

7. Don't comment on your child's weight. Even a mild suggestion that your child may want to lose a few pounds sends a message that the only acceptable body is a slender one. Such negative thinking could contribute to developing an eating disorder. Less talk about appearance and more praise for achievements and talents will help boost your child's self-confidence.

Restored Antique Gas Engine Keeps On Puttin'

READING (Berks Co.) — Late in the winter of 1971, George B. Loughery stumbled upon what most people would quickly term as "junk." But what George saw was the potential for a restored antique gas engine from years gone by.

The 8 hp Columbus gasoline engine, SN 8516, was manufactured about 1904 in Columbus, Ohio. The journey east found this engine temporarily located in Lancaster County at the Landis Brothers farm implement dealership in Rheems.

Acting as general agents in those days, the Landis company provided machinery such as gasoline engines to smaller dealers such as A.P. Merkel Co. in Fleetwood. In 1909 Franklin Y. Hartman purchased the engine for use on the family farm near Reading. Typical of many farms in the early 1900s, this gasoline engine would power numerous machines such as wooden hand-fed threshing machines, feed grinders, buzz saws, or stone crushers.

After many years of service on the Hartman farm, the engine was set out to weather after threshing grain in the summer of 1939. Like so many early pieces of farm equipment, it would rest beside the tractor shed now housing newer more productive equipment.

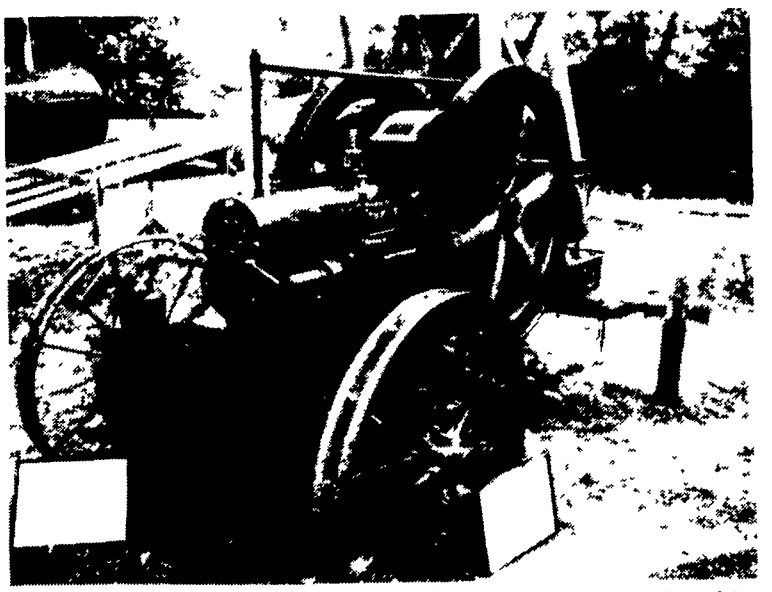
So, 32 years later, George carted the 3,500-pound engine off to his workshop in Muhlenburg Park north of Reading and began the process of restoration. Little did George realize that this would be the most challenging restoration he would ever attempt. Since the mid 1960s this retired engineeer from Western Electric has collected more than antique engines of various sizes.

The erosion from the elements had totally deteriorated all wooden and sheet metal components of the engine, and most of the steel and cast parts needed to be resurfaced and restored. In the process, George would acquire new knowledge about sheet metal and the tooling of more intricate parts such as crank shafts and the like.

Finally in 1981 the sweet sound of "putt . . . putt" was heard and the engine began a new life at festivals and fairs. Today the Columbus engine is painted bright red with yellow accents as it was in its heyday.

If you want to sample a bit of the past, you can enjoy more than 200 additional engines. The Engine and Technology area also displays numerous antique farm machinery, tractors, and memorabilia.

The Hay Creek Fall Festival will be Sept. 10-12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Admission is $5 on Fridays and $7 on Saturday and Sunday. The festival is located at the Historic Joanna Furnace along Rt. 10 two miles north of Morgantown. For additional information, call (610) 286-0388.



If you want to sample a bit of the past, you can enjoy this antique gas engine along with more than 200 additional engines.

Pennsylvania State Grange Seeks Extension Of Dairy Compact

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Master (President) of the Pennsylvania State Grange met recently with legislators and officials to seek passage of the Jeffords-Leahy Dairy Amendment, which would extend the Northeast Dairy Compact and create a similar pilot program in southern states.

With the recent passage of legislation permitting the entrance of Pennsylvania into the Northeast Dairy Compact Master Bill Steel, along with National Grange officials, are calling for approval of the four-point amendment that would: extend the Northeast Dairy Compact until 2002; create a compact pilot program in the south through 2002; mandate option 1-A for the pricing formula for all Class I milk; and require the United States Secretary of Agriculture to use formal rule making to determine the pricing formula for Class II and Class III milk.

"We strongly believe that farmers determining their own dairy price through the Compact comes closer to a free market enterprise than any government pricing mechanism," Steel said. "If the Compact is not reauthorized, we will be giving up an opportunity to provide stability to farmers and consumers."

Since the Northeast Dairy Compact is set to expire on Oct. 1, 1999, Pennsylvania State and National Grange officials feel that the amendment, which is being offered as part of the FY 2000 Agriculture Appropriations Bill and would cost zero dollars for the federal government to implement, is the best opportunity to address these issues.

As an advocate for rural Pennsylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues. The Grange, with over 30,000 members in every county, is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participating in community affairs.

The Pennsylvania State Grange has had policy in support of the dairy compact concept since it was first proposed in New England. At its last convention this past October, the Grange Dairy Committee reaffirmed its support of the Northeast Dairy Compact because of the stability it provides for the price of fluid milk and the opportunity for all parties to have a voice in the price paid to farmers and the cost to consumers.

As part of the amendment, Option 1-A for the pricing formula for Class I (fluid) milk would be mandated instead of Option 1-B that was proposed by United States Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman.

"The majority of the country and dairy industry supports Option 1-A as the pricing formula for Class I milk," Steel said. "Unfortunately, Secretary Glickman included a modified version of Option 1-B as the final rule. the final rule reduces the final prices paid to farmers throughout the country by about half a million dollars per day."

The Grange supports the formal rule making procedures to determine the prices for the other classes of milk so that producers and processors have the chance to provide input on the pricing formula through that process.

The reserve grand champion market lamb was exhibited by Nathan Tice, son of Thomas and Debra Tice of Lebanon, and purchased for $525 by Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank.

Overall, there were 97 head of market lambs selling for a total of $15,700, including champions.

In the sale of market hogs, Country Fare Restaurant of Myerstown purchased Justin Ful's grand champion market hog for $1,000. The 262-pound cross bred animal had a market value of $83.84.

The reserve grand champion market hog was exhibited by Kurt Fleener, son of Tim and Sarah Fleener of Robesonia, and sold to First National Bank of Fredericksburg for $550.

There were 147 head of market swine selling for a total of $44,555, including champions.

The grand and reserve grand champion complete (carcass and on-foot) market animals were also sold during the sale of champions.

Renee Blatt exhibited the grand champion complete market hog for $200 to Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank. The carcass, cut and flash frozen, weighed 185 pounds. It had a loin eye area of 8.3-square

Why Is Swamp Thing Taking Over The Forests?

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Red maple, a tree species that originated in swampy habitats, is taking over eastern forests, said a researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. And its lowly, ordinary nature may be determining its success.

"A century ago — because of its sensitivity to fire — red maple was relegated to the swamps," said Marc Abrams, professor of forest ecology and physiology. "In fact, it used to be called swamp maple. But now that we suppress forest fires, red maple has emerged from the swamps and taken over upland sites, and can be found on just about every landscape in the eastern deciduous forest."

Travelers driving along highways this time of year can see the tell-tale profusion of red maple's silvery branches in Pennsylvania's mountainous landscape. This change in our forests, Abrams said, may have profound economic and ecological consequences.

"Forest regeneration is a huge concern," he said. "Trees that historically dominated this region — the pines, oaks, hemlocks, and hickories — no longer regenerate very well. Red maple is replacing trees that have high economic value. Its soft wood, color and grain aren't as highly valued as that of black cherry, oak and walnut. Also, many wildlife species depend on the trees that are being replaced."

Oaks and hickories supply many small mammals and birds with nuts and acorns. And the oak's rough bark — unlike the maple's smooth bark — houses bark-dwelling insects for insect-eating birds. A shift in wildlife populations is likely to parallel this shift in tree species, Abrams believes.

Red maple's proliferation also poses a biodiversity concern, said Abrams. "Very diverse forests — with six to 12 different species in the overstory — all may be changing to red-maple dominated stands. And stands of single species are more susceptible to total devastation by insects and disease."

So how does the unassuming red maple outcompete the hardy oak? In a May 1998 article in Bioscience, Abrams describes the scientific detective work behind this mystery.

"Through the 1700s and 1800s, the charcoal industry cut a lot of forests and burned them into charcoal," he said. "There was a lot of escaped wildfires. So we had these dramatic disturbances going on that were encouraging growth of the fire-resistant oak.

"But now that we're cutting forests less and suppressing forest fires, forests are going through a natural succession or aging process," he said. "Red maple, because it grows well in shade, is a key late-successional species. But red maple also has the incredible ability to act as an early-successional species and invade disturbed sites as well."

It's red maple's low requirements for water, nutrients and light — the key resources for plants — that allow it to grow on really poor sites, or really good ones. Physiologists call such organisms "supergeneralists" — they do fairly well over a broad array of conditions, rather than have super abilities in a few specialized areas.

"By invading sites in all kinds of conditions — sunny or shady, high or low nutrients, dry or moist — red maple really is an ecological marvel," Abrams said.

Red maple also has taken its uniquely wetland reproductive strategy to the uplands. "After spring floodwaters recede, wetland plants drop their seeds on the fresh soil layer," Abrams said. "Upland species, on the other hand — which aren't tied to spring flooding — drop their seeds in the fall. So red maple can spend most of the growing season establishing seedlings, giving them a three to four month advantage over other plants.

"Also, white-tailed deer don't browse red maple strongly during the summer, yet browse oaks all year round," he said. "In the wintertime, when food is scarce, deer will browse red maple. But it's not as harmful then, because the trees are dormant."

Red maple also may have benefitted from all the ill affects of acid rain and global warming in this century — problems that have particularly affected Pennsylvania, Abrams said.

Like the athlete who isn't the biggest, strongest or fastest, but brings other skills to the playing field, red maple prevails.

Normally, scientists associate aggressive behavior with robust physiology, Abrams explained. They assume plants that photosynthesize faster, for example will outcompete other plants. Or plants with higher nutrient levels in their leaves or better drought adaptation will have the advantage. Red maple breaks the mold.

"The red maple has changed my thoughts on some basic principles of physiological ecology. Ranking species based on the usual physiological parameters may not be a good way to rank their ecological success."

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — State ag educators heard excellent advice and enormous encouragement from the vicinity of Mr. Roger's Neighborhood when the Pennsylvania Association of Agricultural Educators Summer Institute awards banquet was held July 14.

Hedda Bluestone Sharapan, the Neighborhood ambassador and associate producer, gave a special presentation following dinner at the beautiful Oakhurst Tea Room on Route 31.

For 32 years the warm and enthusiastic woman has worked in the Neighborhood with founder Fred Rogers to make life's bad things better with a new perspective and new attitude.

But to change isn't easy, nor is having to understand that everything is different — from mushrooms to grains of sand to human beings.

Fans of Mr. Rogers' Television Visit write mail that indicates how the upbeat and hopeful show lifts a down mood.

"Older kids on a bad day will sit and watch Mr. Rogers," Sharapan reported, "and there are teachers who use Mr. Rogers as an alternative to valium at the end of a day."

Citing three points to help kids and adults understand why they fail when trying to do better, she listed: 1. It is hard to learn new things. 2. When you are learning some — you are likely to make mistakes. 3. Through relationships we work best.

For instance when there is anger on the inside of a kid, an educator has the opportunity to help him or her develop character, patience, and persistence in overcoming deep-rooted attitudes that block the way to problem solving.

Sharapan said that she once read that "Notice is like oxygen," and never has forgotten that truth.

Notice a kid and it will make his day.

"You can go get some help if you have someone you have a hard time getting through to. The goal is to make the kid come back again," Sharapan told the diverse group of seasoned educators and classroom newcomers.

"Attitudes are caught, not taught," she stated, encouragingly. "You are helping to shape the people of tomorrow."

C. Lehman Metzler, PAAE president, presided over the evening's activities while guests were introduced by Thomas N. Ritchey, PAAE treasurer.

Dr. Dennis C. Scanlon, Agriculture and Extension Education, College of Agriculture, Penn State University, delivered the welcome and later presented the Years of Service awards from 35 to one.

Retirees were recognized by Stephen R. Kline, PAAE assistant treasurer. There were 10, lead by Ivan Stauffer who reported has taught 47 years.

President Metzler presented the Teacher of Teachers certificates. Two educators received the gold for having five or more students who have taught agricultural education for at least one year.

Silver went to three educators for having three or four such students and bronze was given to 13 for having one or two such students.

PAAE applicants for 1999 NAAE Region VI awards are Outstanding Young Member, Wayne J. Irish; Outstanding Ag Ed Teacher, C. Lehman Metzler; Outstanding Ag Ed Program, Gerald J. Reichard; Postsecondary All Star Team, Jeffrey Stoltzfus; Outstanding Service, Samuel R. Wagner (NAAE Region VI winner; Outstanding Cooperation, Willie Sole, Quality Farm and Fleet Manager (NAAE Region VI winner); Honorary Life Membership, Dr. Kenneth B. Rhodes; and Ideas Unlimited, Dr. Arba L. Henry, Clifford Wallace.

Seventeen 30-Minute Club awards were presented by Mark B. Dietrick, the PAAE south central regional vice president.

The FFA Citrus Awards from first to last were: James Buchanan High School, West Perry High School, Waynesboro High School, Newport High School, Shippensburg High School, West Snyder High School, East York High School, Elizabethtown High School, State College High School, and Somerset Area High School.

Vicki Lantz from the Big Spring High School in Newville, Cumberland County was recognized as a new member of the National FFA board of directors. Lantz is the first female ag teacher to sit on the influential panel.

Hosts for the evening were Heather Anderson, PAAE eastern regional vice president and Wayne Irish, PAAE north central region vice president.

Center Has Groundbreaking

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) – Depicting a "team" concept, Adams County officials gather around an antique plow from the 1850's on Wednesday, June 30, to break ground for a new Agricultural and Natural Resource Center. The 31,000-square-foot building will combine all local ag-related programs under one roof at a site along Old Harrisburg Road in Cumberland Township. The groundbreaking team includes, front left, William Kleiner, director, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Adams County; Ken Reinhart and Faith Peterson, co-chairs, Ag Center Capital Campaign, Laurence Martick, district manager, Adams County Conservation District; Stanley Wolf and Alan Zepp, co-chairs, Ag Center Steering Committee; Roger Steele, conservation district board chairman, Beverly Stanton, co-op extension board president, and county commissioners Tom Collins, Tom Weaver, and Harry Stokes.

Weather Data At Home In Vineyard

GENEVA, N.Y. – Winemakers in New York will always rely on yeast and sugar, but the Riesling, Pinot, and Chardonnay they bottle in the next century may have as much to do with satellites, digital weather sensors, and global positioning systems as they do with tradition.

"The French have spent centuries fine-tuning the art of vineyard site selection for vinifera grapes. New York grape growers have barely 100 years experience with the more profitable, highly sensitive varieties," said Robert Seem, a plant pathologist at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y., who is seeking to improve the growers' odds.

"Using Geographic Information System (GIS) technology, we have layered digital map and weather data collection systems and produced them over the Internet. Growers now have access to the data they need to situate vineyards optimally and expand production," he said.

The Cornell University professor is a leader in the application of site-specific weather information for the estimation of plant disease risk and has been involved in a three-year project to develop a database to provide better site maps for vineyard selection in New York.

The project is funded by a $47,000 grant from the Viticultural Consortium, a federally funded program that supports research activities in grape growing and wine making in New York and California. Cooperators and collaborators are Steve DeGloria, an international expert on the use of spatial data analysis for environmental applications in the department of Soil Crop and Atmospheric Sciences at Cornell in Ithaca; Roger Magarey, a graduate student in plant pathology at Geneva; Tony Wolf, an authority on viticultural production at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute; and Tim Martinson, area specialist with the Finger Lakes Grape Program who has established a temperature monitoring network throughout the Finger Lakes.

The vineyard site selection maps for New York are based on climate, soil, land use, and elevation," said Seem. The maps are accurate to 1 km2 resolution, and can be viewed on the web at http://www.nysaes.cornell.edu/pp/faculty/seem/magarey. In two or three years, the team expects to have some climate maps refined to the hectare level. A hectare is 2.2 acres – New York vineyards average from 50 to 100 acres in size. General information about vineyard site selection has been compiled by Cornell University viticulturist Robert Poll and can be found at http://www.nysaes.cornell.edu/hort/faculty/pool/NYSite-Soils/SiteSelection.html. Wolf's vineyard selection site is located at http://www.ext.vt.edu/pubs/viticulture/463-016/463-016.html.

Vinifera site selection has become more of an issue for grape growers and wine makers because table wine consumption is expanding in the premium and super-premium categories.

Also, in the last 23 years, the number of wineries in New York has increased from 10 to more than 125. Winemakers have always used American grape varieties such as Concord and Niagara, which are native to New York, to make popularly priced dessert and sparkling wines. The native varieties combine disease, insect, cold, and acid soil tolerance, but are no longer in as great demand as the pricier vinifera, which are harder to grow and more sensitive to environmental conditions.

"If a grower wants to situate a new planting of Riesling grapes in New York, for instance, he will have a much better chance if he uses our mapping system," said Seem. Bankers who provide the considerable investment required to expand also tend to be more comfortable with scientific maps than guesswork.

"From a standpoint of new vineyard investments, you can save yourself a lot of time and money if you have the ability to pinpoint high quality production sites," said Dave Peterson, winemaker and grower relations manager for Swedish Hill Vineyard.

Good site information is not only required for vinifera. According to Seem, "Every grower has superior and more restrictive areas on his farm. Growers need to understand how well their different fields rank in terms of climactic or soil limitations."

The advent of GIS technology has allowed researchers to handle site selection factors at a greater resolution and flexibility than ever before. GIS databases are spatial databases that enable the storage and rapid analysis of vast quantities of geographic information. Researchers expanded and capitalized on the present information, and combined the system with other computer programs that predict and interpolate weather data at the local level to provide growers with more and better information about vineyard siting than has been possible in the past.

In the current project, Magarey and Seem obtained digital maps of climate, soil and land use from ZedX Inc. (a commercial weather information company) that were derived from interpolating data from North American weather stations and adjusted for the influence of elevation. The maps with the greatest impact for New York grape growers are those showing extreme cold temperatures and the length of the frost-free season.

Severe injury to vinifera grapevines is likely to occur when temperatures are less than -5 to -10° F. Climatic maps show the entire state of New York experiences temperatures below these thresholds at lest once every 10 years. Grape cultivation also requires 160 frost-free days, a variable that is strongly influenced by proximity to large bodies of water such as the Great Lakes, the Finger Lakes, and the Hudson River. Soils also need to be deep and well drained, with moderate to high pH. The most suitable soils in New York are those derived from limestone bedrock, which run in a crescent shape across the state.

"By digitally overlaying the climate and soil maps, we were able to show all areas that have both suitable climates and soil," said Magarey. In the final step, the maps were overlain with a land-use map to exclude urban areas and water bodies.

Growers can log onto the website to access these maps or construct maps based on their own criteria. "The maps are of primary use to growers, consultants, and extension educators," said Seem.

The researchers are working on an air flow model map that will chart critical selection criteria such as frost pockets.

Favorites, Drought-Tolerant Varieties Make Annual Display

LONDON, Ohio — A stroll through the Utzinger Garden at this year's Farm Science Review should give plenty of fodder to gardeners looking for new ideas.

"I tried to use some of the less common annuals," said Kathy Burkholder, an Ohio State University horticulture program assistant who assists with the garden design and upkeep. "People tend to stick with marigolds, petunias and geraniums. Here, they'll be able to see how some different options, such as 'Red Plume' gaillardia might look in their own garden."

Visitors will find other unusual delights around the garden, such as Mr. Fuji morning glory climbing the trellis of the deck, Zinnia angustifolia, a white flower with yellow centers, Mexican sunflower, two kinds of ageratum, and cleome, to name a few.

But because petunias are so common, Burkholder has planned a wide variety of the two. A trial garden by the workshop area showcases nine different kinds of petunias, including the Wave Series, a new, lower-maintenance petunia that vines; the Fantasy Series, which is a smaller dwarf plant; the Prime Time Series, and the cultivars "Daddy Blue," "Pink Pearls" and "Merlin Cherry Rose."

"Petunias are such a popular plant, we thought people might be interested in seeing the different color types, fragrances and bloom sizes," Burkholder said.

It's easy to understand why petunias are so popular. Their large, showy flowers really stand out, Burkholder said. But most require frequent pinching, and regular watering.

For those forgetful gardeners — and all gardeners this drought-ridden summer — a flower bed with drought-tolerant varieties of annuals is on display behind the Firebaugh Building. There, visitors will find multicolored cosmos, white and rose gomphrena, vinca, "Crystal White" zinnia, annual blue salvia, and white, pink and scarlet portulaca, which is also called moss rose.

Burkholder will be giving a lecture on gardening with annuals during the Farm Science Review on Tuesday, Sept. 21, at 2 p.m. On Thursday, Sept. 23, she will be lecturing on gardening with perennials, which are also in abundance throughout the garden. In addition, there will be daily guided tours of the gardens which start at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. from the deck adjacent to the McCormick Building.

The Farm Science Review runs Sept. 21-23 and will be held at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio. Tickets for the review are $4 if purchased in advance from county offices of the Ohio State University Extension or local agribusiness, or $6 at the gate. Children 5 years of age and under are admitted free of charge.

Implement Maker Endorses Dry Pesticide Application

MEMPHIS, Tenn. – An innovative crop protection system, the SmartBox®, has been endorsed by Case-IH Corp. for installation on planters the farm implement manufacturer sells to farmers.

"SmartBox is the only dry pesticide application system that greatly reduces exposure to chemicals, automatically compensates for speed, and remembers what chemical the growers applied as well as where, when, and at what rate," Tom Stephen, sales and marketing manager for Ingersoll-Dresser Pump Co., manufacturer of SmartBox.

"Our system even records the application and weather data and lets the farmer transfer it to his office computer," Stephen said.

Developed by IDP, Zeneca Inc., and DuPont Ag Products, SmartBox is a totally closed system, reducing the risk of skin contact and inhalation of chemicals by eliminating the need to open and pour bags of chemicals. A farmer simply has to attach his chemical closed-transfer container to the SmartBox base, mounted on his Case-IH planter, Stephen said.

Besides the attraction of a closed system, SmartBox offers Case-IH customers other major features and benefits:

• The system electronically adjusts to the flow of insecticide to correspond to planter speed and terrain, assuring an accurate application to fields. To make sure there is no leakage of insecticide, the system even turns itself off when a planter is raised for positive end-row shutoff.

•SmartBox is trouble-free: there is only one moving part inside the meter unit.

•Because it is monitored electronically and offers vastly improved application accuracy, SmartBox is a low-rate application system. SmartBox can give a full day's work without needing a refill.

•The electronic controller in the cab of a farmer's tractor stores all relevant data, as well as meeting all state and federal EPA record-keeping requirements for restricted use of pesticides. SmartBox even records the application and weather data and lets the farmer transfer it to is office computer.

THE NEW DIRT MOVING KING IS . . .

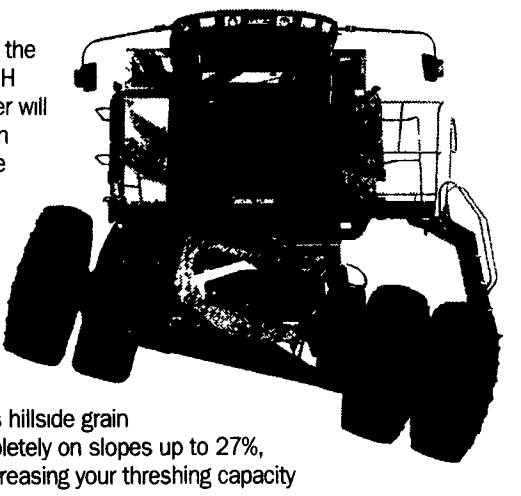
Ken Kreider, BR Kreider & Son, Inc.
"Once I started running the Quadtrac, it didn't take long for me to know it was going to help me do my job better."
Bernell Moyer excavation pan operator

AN AG TRACTOR

For 30 years, the name Steiger has represented the highest quality, most productive 4WD tractors in agriculture. In fact, the Case IH Steiger Quadtrac is now attracting attention in non-agricultural areas. Farmers with Quadtracs have discovered a new source of income by renting or leasing the powerful 4WD to construction and excavation firms. Be sure to see the Quadtrac and Reynolds pan at Hoober's display during Ag Progress Days. And be sure to talk to a Hoober representative about this exciting versatile ag tractor which is making those who move dirt take notice.

NOW EVERY FIELD IS FLAT

Hoober, Inc. is the only dealer in the area with the new Hoober Case-IH Sidehill Combine and only Hoober will have the new sidehill combine on display at Ag Progress Days. See how the Hoober Case-IH Sidehill Combine can make virtually every field a level field.



The Hoober Case-IH Sidehill Combine

Increased Capacity Eliminates hillside grain loss completely on slopes up to 27%, greatly increasing your threshing capacity

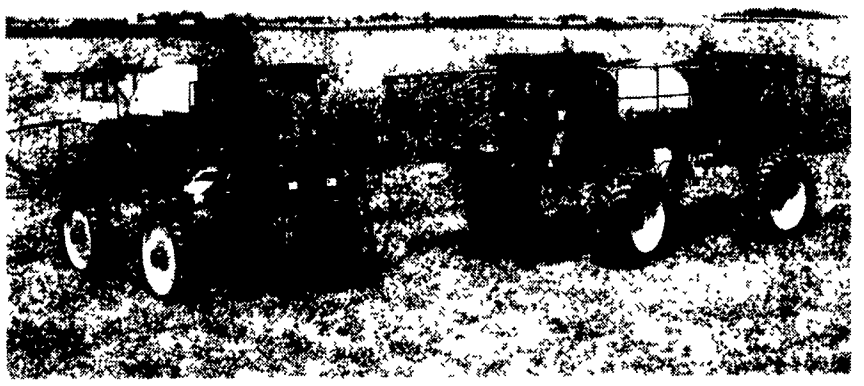
Improved Sample Quality Dockage related to hillside harvesting is eliminated on slopes up to 27%.

Greater Reliability Because the combine chassis remains level, many combine components no longer suffer premature failure due to hillside operation

Excellent Leveling Performance The precise leveling control, matched with a powerful PFC hydraulic system means excellent performance for quick maneuvering in hillside conditions.

Operator Comfort Automatic leveling keeps you comfortable, alert, and productive longer

PATRIOT SPRAYERS PASS THE TEST



In order for Hoober, Inc. to add a new line of equipment to the Hoober farm machinery family, it must meet two important criteria. First, the equipment must provide a real benefit for our customers, and second, it must be high-quality, dependable equipment. That's why Hoober is pleased to welcome Case IH's new Patriot sprayers to the Hoober farm machinery family. Patriot sprayers have a tradition of quality and performance. Plus, Patriot sprayers from Hoober can immediately make your farming operation more profitable. Patriot sprayer performance backed by Hoober quality service and support... the perfect combination for your field.

AND THAT'S JUST THE BEGINNING!

GLENCOE® CC4450

With most tillage tools, you have to stick with one residue plan But the Glencoe CC4450 Combination Chisel gives you a choice. It's designed to mix a little residue or a lot. You make the call For normal or soft conditions, our 20" ripple coulters and straight shovels on 12" spacing cut residue cleanly and evenly. For more aggressive residue mixing, you can use 22" concave discs, 3" twisted points on 15" spacing

Our 6"x4" frame is the strongest in the business with 25% more section than most competitive models. Nine frame configurations are available with working widths from 7' to 23'

Reduce soil compaction and shatter hardpan with optional deep-till shanks that dig an extra 4" to 6" deeper than standard chisel shanks Finish with an optional soil leveling bar to break clods and level the surface

To see the many choices the Glencoe CC4450 Combination Chisel can offer, contact your Glencoe dealer today Because getting what you want has never been this easy.

CLAAS® Country
Meeting all your harvesting needs!

Chopping quality is extremely important for silage and also digestion of the feed. Sharp knives and a precisely adjusted shearbar guarantee a clean cut and even crop flow. Four intake and precompression rollers – two upper and two lower rollers – compress the crop densely and transport it to the chopping cylinder. The latest generation of metal detectors is located in the lower front roller. The gearbox provides for 6 different chop lengths. The changeover between two lengths in each range can be done at the touch of a button. The impressive CLAAS chopping cylinder on all JAGUAR models is a full 29.5" wide with 24 knives in V-formation gives 28,800 cuts per minute. The shearbar is adjusted to the knives without tools. The result is ease of maintenance, with contact adjustment and a power saving cut, plus excellent forage quality.

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference to open up virtually every kernel. This means good quality silage that is easily digested.

GOOD DEALS...AND A GOOD DEAL MORE

Reduce the chance of milk fevers and DA's by targeting each ration to each group of cows. The NDA Vertical Mixer will allow you to cut and blend long-stemmed hay (large or small, round or square bales) with all other feed stuffs, making a palatable, easily digestible ration for your just-fresh cows. By starting with lots of hay in the mix, then gradually reducing the hay until they are on full feed, you will get them to peak production faster, and improve your bottom line.

- New pickup options pack even more hay into the variable-belt chamber.
- Exclusive 7-inch-wide diamond-tread belts reduce chafing and improve bale formation.
- New tying systems (including twin electric twine arms) reduce tying time.
- New lockback PTO collar rotates as much as 60 degrees for easier hookup.
- See why more and more farmers choose John Deere balers... visit your John Deere dealer's store today.

Great Plains Improves Seed Placement

SALINA, Kan – Great Plains Manufacturing announces a revolutionary improvement in seeding technology. With the aid of high-speed video, Great Plains has developed a seed tube and accompanying rear flap that dramatically improve seed placement.

The tube and flap work in conjunction to place seed more accurately for even emergence. The longer seed tube has a five inch front flap that guides seed to the bottom of the trench. The rear flap mounts on the drill opener and trails the seed tube, keeping seed from bouncing in the trench.

Seeing is believing. High-speed video and test plots show substantial improvement in seed placement and emergence Eight days after planting, 86 percent of the final stand had emerged on plots planted with the new tubes compared to 70 percent with the old tubes

The new seed tubes and flaps are standard equipment on all 1999 model year drills from Great Plains. Retrofit kits for earlier Great Plains model are available.

Corle Sale Aimed At Youth

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — The first annual sale of Limousin cattle on the John Corle Farm will be Sept. 4 at the Corle farm in New Enterprise.

Corle, who owns and operates Corle Building Systems Inc. in Imler, said, "We plan to make this sale one for the average buyer. We are particularly looking for the 4-H or FFA kids who want to buy heifers to show at fairs."

Corle smiled as he remembered Bedford County young people who traveled to Ohio looking for show cows. "Now the Ohio kids are coming here," he said.

Corle grew up on a beef cow farm and was coached by his father and grandfather. "It's in my blood," he said.

When the opportunity arose to purchase the former Don Moran farm in New Enterprise in 1994, Corle jumped at the chance. He chose Limousin as the breed of his choice because "we liked both the cattle and the people in the business. They are also good for the current market of lean beef," he said.

The Limousin cattle were originated in France and were imported through semen in Canada about 30 years ago. Corle's farm manager, Allen Smith said, "John did all of the right things. He started with good genetics and built his herd around three cow families. He didn't limit himself.

"That's the start of a good herd," Smith said. "And the second thing is to feed them right. We raise all of our own feed, including barley, oats, and corn."

Despite the dry weather experienced to date, the Corles have a good corn crop.

With more than 1,400 acres of farm land, Corle can be choosy about the location of the corn. "We chose the best bottom ground we could find," he said.

Although Corle is fairly new to the cattle business, he has been making a name for himself at various fairs around the county. They have their own bulls and ship semen all over the United States. "We've had numerous grand champion females at state fairs," he said.

Corl Sweet Dream was fourth overall in points for showing in the nation. She was the grand champion female in Murphysboro, Tenn. at a level II show.

"It's kids like Dakota who make us proud," Corle said. "Our only wish when we sell cattle to young people is that we could provide more coaching. However, rules and regulations prevent us from doing so."

The Corles do not show cattle at local fairs because "we feel we would be competing against our own market. We would rather see the kids take home these trophies."

The September sale will feature a large majority of bred heifers with a few open heifer and cow/calf pairs. Beginning at 1 p.m., the 80 lots are expected to be sold by late afternoon.

"Some cattle will undoubtedly go high," John said, "but we hope to have some that will be affordable to anyone interested in getting into the beef business. Regardless of the price, they will be from good lines and many from the same genetics as our top winning show cattle."

U. Of Minn. Launches MBA With Animal Agriculture Specialty

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The University of Minnesota has formed an international partnership with a leading Canadian agricultural university to offer animal agribusiness professionals around the globe the world's first masters of business administration (MBA) program with a specialty in animal agriculture.

Three new courses to be electronically delivered by the University of Minnesota's College of Veterinary Medicine will make up the animal agriculture stream of the University of Guelph's MBA in Agriculture program. The new stream is designed to broaden the scope of the existing program and will be offered starting with the January 2000 enrollment.

"We're excited about participating in this program. Animal production is becoming an increasingly complex business where relevant business skills and knowledge are needed. The program we will be offering within the University of Guelph MBA responds to that need in a unique way," noted Dr. John Fetrow, College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Minnesota.

The faculty of the College of Veterinary Medicine will instruct and coach courses focused on dairy production management and swine production management to students preferring to specialize in one of these areas. An overall course in animal production management will also be part of the animal agriculture stream.

"The University of Minnesota has a strong program and a good reputation as a leader in the area of livestock production management. Combining our global expertise enhances our international reach," said Dr. Tom Funk, director of the University of Guelph's MBA in Agriculture program based in Guelph, Ontario. "It's a partnership of strengths that make an attractive MBA program even more attractive to people involved in animal production management."

The two universities are hoping to attract veterinarians, large producers, feed and nutrition professionals and executives from companies involved in veterinary pharmaceuticals and animal production finance to this stream of the MBA.

Since being launched in 1997 as the world's first electronically delivered MBA program focused exclusively on agriculture and agrifood, the MBA in Agriculture has become the largest graduate program at the University of Guelph More than 100 students representing a diversity of agribusiness sectors from across Canada, the United States, and the world have enjoyed the accessibility and flexibility of using leading-edge interactive technology to take an MBA from their home, farm, or office.

Zettlemoyer Inducted To Hall of Fame

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — One of the newest names to grace the National Auctioneers Association Hall of Fame is that of a Pennsylvania man.

Ralph Zettlemoyer of Fogelsville achieved one of the auction industry's top honors July 24 during the culminating event of the National Auctioneers Association's (NAA) 50th Anniversary Convention in Grand Rapids, Mich. Zettlemoyer and two other men were inducted to the Hall of Fame during the President's Banquet.

Names of the Hall of Famers are a secret until they are announced, and all three 1999 industees said they had no idea such an honor would be bestowed upon them.

Plaques with the three inductees' likenesses will be added to the Hall of Fame wall at NAA Headquarters in Overland Park, Kan., a suburb in the Kansas City, Mo., metropolitan area. The other two inductees were Robert Steffes, CAI, GPPA, Fargo, N.D., and T. Joseph Tarpley, CAI, of Rome, Ga.

Zettlemoyer is a past director of the NAA, having been elected in 1985. He has been an auctioneer since 1955, when he joined the association. In addition, he is a past president and vice president of the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association (PAA). In 1994, he was inducted to the PAA Hall of Fame.

Zettlemoyer has conducted farm equipment, real estate, and antiques and personal property auctions. He has served as a judge for the National Auctioneers Association's International Auctioneer Championship, and he's involved with the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association.

Massey Ferguson Introduces New Tractors

ATLANTA — July, 1999 – Massey Ferguson is introducing seven new heavy-duty, large-frame MF 8200 Series full-featured tractors from 135 to 225 horsepower for heavy tillage, haying, and large loader applications.

"The MF 8200 Series is the next generation of big-horsepower, large-implement Massey Ferguson® tractors, replacing the award-winning 8100 series," said John Sargeant, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager. "For all their size, these tractors are amazingly refined with a new generation cab and controls, advanced powershift transmission, and many more productive features."

"The wide choice of sizes, standard and optional features, wheels and tires, and attachments make it easy for customers to match these tractors to many different applications and needs," said Sargeant.

MF 8200 Series tractors from 145 to 225 hp feature SISU/Valmet 6 cylinder diesel engines, from 6.6 to 8.4 liters, with dual cylinder heads, cross flow head design, and long-stroke crankshafts for high torque, increased power, durability, and fuel-efficient operation.

The MF 8220 at 135 PTO hp is powered by the Perkins 1000 series 6 cylinder diesel engine with the Fastram™ fuel-efficient, reduced emission combustion technology.

The 160, 180, 200 and 225 hp models feature new electronically controlled full Powershift transmissions with 18 forward and 6 reverse speeds and clutchless power shuttle. The transmission gives smooth in-line shifting, up or down pulse shifting, progressive shifts, shuttle shifts, automatic downshifts, and programmed startups.

Agco Announces New Mapping Software

ATLANTA, Ga. – Agco Corporation (NYSE: AG), a major worldwide manufacturer and distributor of agricultural equipment, announced that Version 2.00 of its Fieldstar® yield mapping software has been released.

It has the improved ability to provide crop yield comparisons and profitability figures that are unavailable on other precision farming programs.

Index mapping, a new technique from Fieldstar, will allow producers to view multiple-year yield maps from different crops. Each crop's yield is displayed in percentage terms, as opposed to bushels. Information from Index Maps help producers determine if a problem is across the crop line or just inherent to a particular crop.

Profit margin mapping is another new feature from Fieldstar. The program accepts cost data from producers, then calculates where a field is profitable and where it is not. Underperforming areas could receive additional attention or be placed out of production, possibly reducing costs.

The new version also offers improved features including marker maps, point data maps, "yield off" features, and new data export functions. Fieldstar Version 2.00 software is available free to Fieldstar Yield Map owners and will be sent free to all registered Fieldstar Yield map customers.

Utility Tractor Line Offers New High Performance Features

ATLANTA, Ga. – "Operators around the world depend on Massey Ferguson 200 Series tractors for farm and grounds maintenance jobs," said Tim Wagner, Massey Ferguson, product marketing manager. "The strong demand for these utility tractors in world markets has helped Massey Ferguson remain the world's best-selling tractor brand for 35 consecutive years.

"Massey Ferguson is introducing a new high-performance MF 200 Series tractor line to meet the increasing requirement by the world farmers for added productivity and economy of operation," said Wagner. "And we're increasing productivity without stretching the customer's budget."

Massey Ferguson 200 Series utility tractors, from 42 to 69 PTO horsepower, are the preferred choice by many operators for easy handling of all jobs on small and specialty farms; efficient light tillage, planting, haying, hauling and chores on larger farms; mowing, brush-cutting, and landscaping for grounds maintenance companies; loader and material handling jobs from firewood to fertilizer; and hard use by rental, construction, manufacturing, and building companies.

Nine new MF 200 Series tractors retain the quality components and features customers have come to depend on; fuel-efficient Perkins engines, advanced Ferguson system hydraulics and easy to use transmissions with a wide range of working speeds; 4WD front axle engagement on-the-go without clutching; dual-stage "live" 540 PTO (independent PTO some models); fully adjustable spring suspension seats; and folding ROPS.

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader. With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes.

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage. It is especially helpful in larger silos.

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit. All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around. Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier.

For more information or the location of the Lancaster dealer nearest you, call today. 1-800-635-8708.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!
New Products Now Available...
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its
Soybean Exchange Program
As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION
& STEP 1

We have found be adding 12 8 oz of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

PLANT NUTRITION

FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER
• Near neutral pH
• 100% available
• Root zone placement
• Low salt index
• Foliar Feeding

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality Unlike many liquid fertilizers Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution It is not just particles suspended in liquid Each drop contains the exact N P-K ratio of the standard formulation Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won t settle out It handles easily It can be stored indefinitely When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality

VEGETABLE OIL

1 Encapsulates the chemical
2 Helps generate uniform droplet size
3 Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
4 Reduces chemical drift
5 Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability
6 Reduces chemical wash off
7 Gives you better control of the chemicals

One of Farm For Profit s main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals

TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL

The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will

- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output

"I Heard That" Wasn't it you that said you want a beautiful farm that is self supporting and even pays you quite handsomely besides for your labor to operate it??? - That is tough to find in today's market

Let's see - you wanted a large brick farm house (updated) and maybe a large modern addition w/a garage attached Here we even add an oversized 3 car detached garage that looks like it was designed for entertaining guests – it even has it s own kitchen There is a large grassy area with a large farm pond - oh my!! What else?

Well how about three large turkey barns which are presently in operation and with all the good modern equipment in them But, you see the owners are ready to retire and would like someone like you to take over Sound too good to be true? Ck it out

Oh yes, there is also another dwelling if you would prefer to put in another operator/ hired hand This truly is a dream property with the driveways nicely paved and buildings in real good shape This is all on about 34 acres which is nicely secluded but near to every kind of service you might desire

How To Store H_2O for Y2K

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – On the chance that the Y2K computer bug causes disruptions in public and private water systems on Jan. 1, 2000, some people are planning to store drinking water for emergency use. But a water quality expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says consumers should take a few precautions to make sure stored water is safe to drink.

"Although it's unlikely that the Y2K bug will cause major problems with water supplies, it's probably not a bad idea to have some water set aside for any unforeseen emergency," said William Sharpe, professor of forest hydrology.

Sharpe said the biggest Y2K threat to water systems is the potential loss of electricity to power treatment plants, pumps and other equipment But he says most public water systems have made plans for possible disruptions.

"A recent survey shows that nearly all water systems serving at lease 1 million customers have formal plans to deal with Y2K," Sharpe said. "But only 52 percent of systems serving fewer than 1,000 customers have plans in place. Smaller suppliers and homeowners who rely on private wells with electric pumps appear to be most susceptible to potential Y2K problems."

People with private water supplies can use gasoline-powered generators to run electric water pumps, and hand pumps also are available for use with wells. "Generators and hand pumps should be tested before Jan. 1 to be sure that they deliver water," Sharpe said.

Sharpe offers these tips for consumers who plan to store an emergency supply of water:

• Store at lease one gallon of water per person per day. "The American Red Cross recommends stocking enough disaster supplies to last up to a week," said Sharpe. "The Federal Emergency Management Agency advises storing at least three days of food and water prior to Y2K, and many state government agencies are making similar recommendations."

• Use appropriate containers. "Containers should be FDA approved," Sharpe said. "One-gallon plastic milk or water jugs are acceptable, but colored plastic is better than clear, and screw-on caps are better than push caps." Approved five-gallon colored plastic containers also are available.

• Disinfect containers and water. "Milk jugs should be thoroughly washed with soap and water and rinsed with a chlorine solution and plenty of water," said Sharpe. "Water can be disinfected by boiling or by adding chlorine or iodine."

Recommendations for disinfecting water can be found on the Environmental Protection Agency Web site at http:www.epa.gov/OGWDW/faq/emerg.html and in the Penn State Cooperative Extension publication #345, "Safeguarding Wells and Springs From Bacterial Contamination." Single copies of the publication are available free of charge by contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

• Store water properly. "Fill jugs as full as possible and store in a cool, dark location. Sharpe said. "Water that's been disinfected and stored properly in approved containers will have an indefinite shelf-life. But it's probably a good idea to use the water or refill the containers within six months to a year after storing.

SILO-FILLER

The Silo-Filler has been designed to give the user maximum capacity, flexibility and product control. It does not actually "Throw" the product, but blows it gently, using a cushion of air. With the Walinga Silo-Filler, you simply dump from your truck or trailer directly into the hopper, and the transfer auger moves the product up and into the Drop-Thru / Blow-Thru Airlock. The blower then moves the product up the silo pipes. Ideal for blowing high moisture corn into silos, the Silo-Filler is compact, and can easily be moved from one location to another.

House Agriculture Panel To Conduct Meeting At Ag Progress Days

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee will again, for the third year in a row, hold a "town meeting" style public hearing during Penn State University's Ag Progress Days this August in Rocksprings, Centre County, according to Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-147).

The meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Aug. 19 in the College Exhibits Building Theater, said Bunt, who chairs the committee. There will be a one-hour lunch break starting at noon.

"We are once again interested in hearing the concerns of farmers and others whose business and livelihood is made in agriculture-related businesses," Bunt said. "The committee is continuing to seek ideas on how state government can assist farmers and agricultural businesses to remain stable and be profitable."

Bunt said the town meeting format will help create an informal atmosphere leading to a free exchange of ideas and potential solutions. He said it won't be necessary for participants to have prepared or written remarks.

"After arriving at the meeting people can just sign up for a five-minute slot to speak," he said. "Each committee member will have several minutes to respond and ask questions of the participants.

"We don't intend to limit the number of topics a speaker may discuss, but the issues should pertain to the role of state government in agriculture and how it can better serve the agricultural community."

"We want to open the discussion to local concerns on statewide topics like farmland preservation, 'right-to-farm' and other land use issues, or barriers to the profitable operation of agricultural businesses," the lawmaker said.

"Our desire is to hear about possible solutions. We don't have all the answers in Harrisburg and we know people around the state have lots of interesting and novel ideas. The committee members need to hear these ideas and discuss potential solutions to agriculture business problems. The result could lead to legislation in the General Assembly that would benefit agriculture across the Commonwealth."

For more information about the meeting, contact Rep. Bunt at House Box 202020, Harrisburg, PA 17120-2020. Telephone number is (717) 787-6937. Fax number is (717) 772-6952.

Lyme Disease Information At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) – What is Lyme disease? How do people get it? Should I get the Lyme disease vaccine?

Get all the information you need to become an informed consumer at the "Lyme Disease Tent" at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19. the tent will be located at West 11th Street, next to the College Exhibits Building.

A Penn State physician or nurse will be on hand to answer questions, as well as a representative from the drug company that makes the vaccine. Dr. Tim Weyandt, director of occupational medicine at Penn State, will be a daily presentation at 3 p.m.

"Pennsylvania is a woodlands state, and where you have woodlands, you have the potential to contract Lyme disease," said Weyandt. "In its early stages, Lyme disease is easily treatable with antibiotics. But if you wait until the late stage, it's a crippling, devastating, and untreatable disease."

The best ways to reduce your chance of contracting Lyme disease are to take precautions when outside and learn its signs and symptoms Some people also may want to get the Lyme disease vaccine. "Information at the tent can help you decide," Weyandt said.

Lyme disease is caused by a bacteria transmitted through the black-legged tick - formally known as the deer tick. Black-legged ticks are much smaller than the more common dog tick. When young, they are about the size of a period.

"Wherever you have deer, you have the potential to contract Lyme disease," Weyandt said. Other hosts include the white-footed mouse and rabbit.

Within three to 30 days after being bitten, many people get a red rash at the site of the bite. The rash is often circular and may expand over the next few weeks up to 18 inches in diameter. But some people never develop the rash.

Infected people also may experience flu-like symptoms, such as headaches, fever, aching muscles and joints, fatigue, and swollen glands within two to 10 days of exposure.

As the disease progresses, people may experience migraine-like headaches, arthritis, and an irregular heartbeat. Nervous system problems include loss of memory and difficulty concentrating. If left untreated, infected people may develop severe arthritis, with permanent damage, and cardiac and nervous system complications.

IS YOUR ESTATE PLANNED

Extension Farm
Management Agent

Estate planning involves many once-in-a-lifetime decisions. It is not merely writing a will. It involves many complex issues, feelings, and emotions. The biggest reason estate planning is overlooked is that no one feels comfortable talking about dying. Many people spend little or no time planning their estate — they are planning to live forever!

Unfortunately, it usually is not at the top of one's "to-do" list, either. One task of the farm manager is planning and organizing the transfer of the farm business to the next generation, or to the party carrying on the business. If you die without "putting your farm financial house in order," the greater the potential for chaos, family disagreements, forced sales of farm assets, and increased taxes often result.

Establishing personal and family goals are necessary to do an effective job of developing one's estate plan. Clearly defined goals and objectives will simplify the estate planning process.

1. Provide security for retiring parents and surviving family members.

2. Treat farm and nonfarm children equally and/or fairly.

3. Provide guardianship for minor and/or handicapped children. Name the guardians and provide funds for the care and education of your children. Appoint the executor or executrix to settle/adminster your estate and trustee(s) to manage your trust(s).

4. Preserve the family wealth. Turn entire farm business over to family member(s). Specific goals must be set and steps taken to avoid family disagreements. This requires adequate planning, which may include a will, additional agreements, planned gifting program, trusts, insurance, family mortgages, installment sales, etc.

5. Provide for the desired distribution of all farm and personal assets, especially family heirlooms, antiques, and other specific gifts or bequests. The will must include all details on what person(s) get what.

6. Provide revenue for your church, charitable organization(s), or other humanitarian institution(s).

7. Provide liquidity (cash) in the estate to pay costs. This can prevent a forced sale of assets in order to pay settlement costs, including taxes. Life insurance is commonly used to provide needed cash.

8. Minimize estate settlement expenses. In estates that exceed $650,000, tax considerations become more important. Most strategies that reduce taxes require managerial control of assets.

Once you have prioritized your goals, you should take an inventory of personal and business assets and liabilities. Upon completion of your goals and inventory, you will be ready to take action with your estate planning team. Your estate planning team may include the following: family members, attorney, tax accountant, bank trust officer, business management consultant or advisor, cooperative extension agent, financial planner, insurance professional, etc.

If you don't have a will, the state of Pennsylvania has one for you at no cost. If you die without a will (to die intestate), your assets will be distributed by the state's distribution plan. Pennsylvania's asset distribution will probably not be the same as yours. A will can convey to special people, corporations, charities, churches, or other beneficiaries the specific property that you want them to receive.

Saving inheritance taxes is critical since the federal unified gift and estate tax rates start at 37 percent of the net estate above $650,000 and quickly increases, by steps, up to the maximum rate of 55 percent on a $3 million estate. The Pennsylvania State Inheritance tax is 6 percent or 15 percent of the entire estate, depending upon who inherits the property.

Keep in mind that there are many tools available to you to facilitate the transfer of your estate, such as different ownership methods, last will and testament, power of attorney, trusts, special farmland use evaluation, sale of conservation easement, gifting, insurance, business structures (partnerships, corporations, etc.), just to name a few.

Now is an excellent time to get your family together and discuss your estate plan and thoughts. Communication is key to the success of your plan and family members understanding your wishes.

Contact your local cooperative extension office for further resources and personal assistance in helping you set priorities, estate planning tools, options, etc.

NEW! New Holland TND/TNS Tractors 42 to 62 PTO hp

TND/TNS tractors have the features customers say they need. These tractors outperform and outmaneuver all others in the three-cylinder class. Plus they're loaded with comfort and convenience usually found on much bigger tractors.

Exclusive Traction Management System (TNS tractors only) automatically engages FWD when and only when you need it.

Comfortable cab is suspended and pressurized, shielding the operator from vibration, noise and dirt. Heater and A/C, two doors, tilt/telescoping steering, front and rear washers and wipers, and a best-in-class lighting package are standard. Excellent visibility and an overall height as low as 85.1" lets you go places competitive cab tractors can't.

Ag Progress Days Offers Machinery Demonstrations

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) – Farmers or homeowners looking to test-drive a new vehicle can cancel trips to car lots and head toward Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19

By visiting the expanded "ride-and-drive" area, you can test drive and compare the latest full-size tractor models from a variety of manufacturers. Homeowners with large yards or farmers looking to handle small jobs also may be interested in the separate compact lawn and garden tractor ride-and-drive, featuring gasoline- or diesel-powered machines with no more than 35 horsepower engines.

"We'll have products from a manufacturer of compact lawn and garden tractors and products from three manufacturers of full-size diesel tractors," said Bob Oberheim, manager of Ag Progress Days. "Visitors can experience first-hand the latest models and any changes that the tractor companies have made in the last year. The compact lawn and garden tractors are useful for part-time or hobby farmers and for smaller farm jobs such as mowing, pulling a small spreader or hauling bales of hay."

The ride-and drive-site, located between 1st street and Rt. 45, will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 17 and 19, and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Aug. 18. All operators must be at least 18 years old and sign a waiver of liability. Company representatives will screen operators for eligibility.

In addition to the tractor ride-and-drive, more than 300 commercial exhibitors will display goods and services at Ag Progress Days. Besides tractors and other heavy machinery, their wares range from seed, feed and fertilizer to insurance, consulting services, small power equipment and many other products.

"Visitors can find information on state-of-the-art equipment and cutting-edge techniques, all in one convenient location," Oberheim said. "Ag Progress Days is one-stop shopping for farmers."

On Tuesday, Aug. 17, visitors can see competitors from youth groups across the state display their knowledge in "The Farm Safety and Health Challenge Game," starting at 1:30 p.m. in the college building theatre. The game features one team round and two challenge rounds, as the participants compete for slots at the championship to be held at the Pennsylvania farm Show in January 2000.

At the Farm Safety Demonstration Area at the end of West 8th Street, safety specialists will demonstrate how cellular plastic insulation, commonly used in farm and rural buildings, can be a fire hazard if improperly installed. A daily demonstration will show how the toxic and flammable gases released by such fires can flash over to other structures and how to contain such fires.

Other planned field demonstrations will focus on corn chopping, silage bagging , vegetable growing in plastic high tunnels, high-moisture hay baling and combining with precision farm equipment.

In addition, various exhibits and workshops will feature information on the latest research-based production techniques, government programs and regulations, and various educational initiatives, ranging from health and safety to forest stewardship.

Cutting-Edge Technologies For Livestock At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — As technology and research push more improvements from the laboratory to the farm gate, it gets tougher to keep up with innovations. Dairy and livestock producers can see the latest advances by visiting the Animal Sciences Facility at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

The exhibit, which is a joint effort between Penn State's departments of dairy and animal science and veterinary science, is jampacked with examples of state-of-the-art animal science technologies, according to Terry Etherton, head of the dairy and animal science department.

"We're proud of this year's exhibits," he said, "because they provide a cutting-edge perspective of several new and useful technologies that should be of great interest to Pennsylvania farmers engaged in dairy and animal production."

The futuristic wonders start with the exhibition building itself. Called an "animal greenhouse," it's a low-cost and surprisingly sturdy farm building that uses a metal tubing frame and plastic sheeting to fulfill all of the functions of a traditional barn at a fraction of the cost.

The animal sciences facility also will feature "What's It Cost to Raise a Dairy Heifer?" an interactive showcase that allows dairy farmers to compare their actual costs of raising a dairy heifer to those of other farmers across the state. Judd Heinrichs, professor of dairy and animal science, explains that he and other staff canvassed the state to assemble comprehensive information on costs for feed, labor, equipment, and other aspects of raising a heifer to milk production. The information is assembled in a spreadsheet that dairy farmers can use to rank their operation's efficiency with others across the state.

"We contacted half dairy farmers and half contract raisers to give a balanced representation to both systems," he said. "We got the current costs for 1999, and we tried to cover everything — even costs for health care to the heifers and the cost of interest on loans." Farmers can consult with dairy science faculty at the exhibit and can take the spreadsheet printouts home for analysis and consultation with their county cooperative extension agents.

Another display will look at the "Economic Advantage of Induced Lactation." Induced lactation of subfertile cows may help to increase profits, with potential savings of more than $500 per cow each year compared to using replacement heifers. The Pennsylvania Cattle Feeder's Initiative, in "Blueprint for Success," will present a program that looks to increase the profitability and value of cattle fed in Pennsylvania.

Six exhibits in the animal sciences "greenhouse" will examine aspects of "Being a Good Neighbor" by using veterinary science advances to prevent animal disease transmission between farms. Displays will include on-farm practices to prevent disease introduction, milk safety practices, and a series of "Test Your Knowledge" quizzes on common farm animal diseases.

Returning for its second year at Ag Progress Days is the popular Youth Skillathon and Lamb Show, Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the Junior Livestock Exhibition Tent. Pennsylvania 4-H and FFA members in four age groups will test their knowledge about lamb production in a multiphase competition that includes a showmanship competition, a written test, and a series of identification stations. That will be followed by a traditional lamb show with exhibitors competing in nine weight classes.

Conservation Exhibits At Ag Progress Days: Something For Everyone

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) – Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19, can learn how to take better care of the land at the Natural Resource Conservation Partnership area on West 11th Street.

Previously known as the Con-servation Education Area, the Natural Resource Conservation Partnership exhibits will highlight the soil and its relationship with other resources, including people. Visitors can explore workshops and "living demonstrations," or go on various daily tours.

"We changed our name to represent the resources we all work to protect, and the partnerships we believe make it all come together, including landowners and their families," said Stacy Mitchell, state public affairs specialist for the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service. "These partnerships are vital."

At Graziers Forum, daily at 11 a.m., farmers from across the state will share their experiences with how grazing benefits their land. "This forum is an excellent opportunity for farmers to get ideas from somebody who's actually using the practices," said Mitchell. A daily 2 p.m. grazing management workshop will explore how producers can reap profit from their pastures.

"We're also celebrating the Soil Survey Centennial, a publication that relates the qualities of defined soil types and where each type is found," Mitchell said. "Governor Ridge recently signed a proclamation that designates Hazelton as the state soil. Soil scientists will be digging a wedge or pit in the ground so visitors can see the soil layers This exhibit will show why soils is such an important resource and why water moves through different soils the way it does."

Hazelton, a deep, well-drained soil used mostly for forests and hay lands, was designated the state soil because it's found in more counties than any other soil, Mitchell explained. The state tree (Eastern hemlock), flower (mountain laurel), bird (ruffed grouse) and mammal (white-tail deer) all thrive in or on Hazleton soil.

"Last year, kids made soil profiles in test tubes," said Mitchell. "This year they'll get to see a real soil profile in the walk-in pit. Kids also can enjoy making fish prints inside the tent, practice casting for their next fishing trip, see mounted specimens of various wildlife and use their sense of touch to guess items that affect the soil and water quality of the land."

Daily tours will show visitors how conservation practices affect the land. The conservation tour will show practices that protect soil and improve water quality. Crop residue management, contour strip-cropping, buffer stirps, cropland terraces, waterways and diversions will be highlighted. Buses leave daily at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The wetlands and stream corridor management tour will show how stream crossings, streambank fencing and restored wetlands can improve streambank corridors and water quality. Buses leaves at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily.

The walking tour on forest stewardship will feature forest ecology, forest history, forest management and wildlife habitat improvement. Buses to the walking trail leave daily on the hour from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and every half hour during peak times. On Wednesday, additional tours will be held at 4 and 5 p.m. Participants should dress comfortably for this walking tour.

The following "living demonstration areas" also will be operating continuously:

• Soil surveys and soil quality will be interesting to agricultural producers, builders and owners of small tracts of land. Here, visitors can walk into a "soil-pit" and see the layers that make up a soil profile.

•Forest riparian buffers will show how plantings along streams can prevent erosion, as well as filter sediments and nutrients before they reach the water.

• Manure handling and wastewater disposal systems will feature an on-site, active, liquid wastewater disposal system. Visitors can talk with specialists about options for handling manure and wastewater.

•Grazing management will include different watering systems, fencing materials and plots of various forage grasses.

•Nutrient management will feature a manure spreader and compost pile. Specialists will discuss nutrient management planning and on-farm composting.

•Living cover and conservation plants will feature plants that reduce erosion and provide wildlife habitat. Visitors can see how corn, soybeans, small grains and forages can be planted into a living mulch such as crownvetch using minimum or no-tillage cropping practices.

One-Stop Gardening Advice Available At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Bugs on your begonias? Grubs got your grass? Gardening fans with questions can enjoy "one-stop shopping" for answers to all their problems at the Landscape, Lawn and Garden Tent at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

Thanks to a new location this year, visitors can enjoy the cut flower garden, then ask the experts questions on horticulture, plant pathology, turfgrass, and entomology in one convenient location, according to J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Last year, we sent so many people back-and-forth that we saw the need to consolidate the two activities," Nuss said. "By combining the gardening tent with the cut flower garden, we can show visitors new products and provide them with information on any plant-related problems."

Professional growers and home gardeners interested in cut flowers can learn about varieties, weed control, and business opportunities. The variety trial includes more than 100 new varieties from asters to sunflowers, as well as some unusua flowers not widely known in the market.

Flower arranging demonstrations will be held daily in the tent at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Visitors can get information on starting and managing a field-grown cut flower business or just enjoy a few quiet minutes walking through the flower beds.

Then, Penn State faculty and cooperative extension agents can help diagnose your plant, insect, and mite problems. Additional advice will be available on indoor plants, tillage, mulching, flowers, tree fruit, woody ornamentals, and vegetables.

Visitors and hobbyists are encouraged to bring samples of turf, plant, or insects to receive an on-the-spot evaluation. If the experts can't solve the problem immediately, they will examine it further in a lab at Penn State's University Park campus and contact the gardener with their diagnosis and management suggestions.

Examples of infested plant material as well as cultural problems that affect the health of woody plants will be a part of this educational display.

In addition, the Ag Awareness Foundation will help kids learn about seed germination by making "Beany Babies," a soybean seed in a jewelry bag that kids hang around their necks The seed will germinate in 24 hours -- instant "Beany Baby!" Other interactive displays will be presented on plant pathology, food sciences and entomology. Kids also can visit displays on 4-H and FFA, the national student organization that prepares members for leadership and careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture.

• Shaver's Creek Environmental Center. Here's a unique chance to get a closer look at some native Pennsylvania animal species Visitors will see live raptors, snakes, turtles and frogs, as well as hands-on natural history exhibits.

• Farm Animal Learning Center. Visitors can learn about farm animal welfare, including animal care and use issues. Hosted by Pennsylvanians for the Responsible. Use of Animals, the exhibit will include dairy and beef calves, goats, lambs, pigs, miniature horses, chickens "retired" greyhounds, plus other farm and companion animals. The exhibit also will feature special information about the myths and facts of farm animal production.

• Family Room Building. Kids can take a break at the Family Room's "Kid's Corner," reading stories and working on art projects. Materials such as safety scissors, glue and visors will be provided. Then, take time to explore exhibits and demonstrations of importance to Pennsylvania's families, such as health, cooking, nutrition, character, safety, finances and tobacco prevention. Some exhibits will feature puppet shows, games and other interactive ways to learn. Participants also can go on a treasure hunt within the building and win a prize.

Other Ag Progress Days activities for the younger crowd include the SciQ Junior contest, where contestants test their agricultural knowledge in a TV quiz-show format. The game will be played Tuesday at 10 a.m., and Wednesday at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. in the College Exhibits Building Theatre. Award-winning short story author and master storyteller Jan Kinney will weave her magic tales in the theatre on Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. and Wednesday at noon.

At the Horse Arena (Main Street, behind the Special Events Building), visitors can see 4-H and FFA youth compete for prizes, or watch the Pennsylvania State Police Mounted Drill Team perform. The drill team also will ride through the show grounds. Children also may enjoy wandering through the new corn maze on East 5th Street.

At the Natural Resource Conservation Partnership area (West 11th Street), Kids can see a real soil profile in a walk-in pit, make T-shirts with fish prints, practice casting for their next fishing trip, see mounted wildlife specimens and use their sense of touch to guess items that affect the soil and water quality of the land.

Zimmerman To Leave Farm Bureau For New Position

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau's longtime director of governmental relations, Paul F. "Rick" Zimmerman, will be soon leaving his post with the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, after nearly 16 years of dedicated service to the organization and its members, and an extensive list of accomplishments that have benefited the agricultural industry in New York State.

Zimmerman will begin his new position with the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets as its new deputy commissioner for economic development and agricultural policy in mid-August.

"On behalf of the nearly 30,000 members of New York Farm Bureau, we have greatly appreciated the years of dedicated and exemplary service he has committed to the organization and to New York State's agricultural industry," said John Lincoln, president of New York Farm Bureau. "We wish Rick the best of luck!"

In 1983, Zimmerman joined the New York Farm Bureau staff to focus on public policy issues after winning the Young Farmer and Rancher Discussion Meet Competition at the organization's annual meeting. "Once I started talking about agricultural policy issues, I knew my career path should direct me toward serving the agricultural industry through public policy advocacy," said Rick Zimmerman. "It has been a very rewarding experience for me."

Since 1986, Zimmerman has been New York Farm Bureau's principal lobbyist, responsible for coordinating the organization's programs and activities designed to improve state and federal public policies. Under his guidance, New York Farm Bureau was able to achieve passage of numerous legislative proposals, including landmark legislation establishing a state income tax credit for school taxes paid by farmers. Zimmerman also headed New York Farm Bureau's successful efforts to reduce worker's compensation rates for farmers, as well as most recently, gaining passage of state legislation that allows dairy farmers to enter a dairy compact.

"Rick has worked tirelessly for New York Farm Bureau and its membership, and has been as integral part of the organization's overall success for many years. Although we hate to see Rick leave Farm Bureau, at least he's not leaving New York State's agricultural industry, and will continue to serve an important role on behalf of New York agriculture," said Jeffery Kirby, New York Farm Bureau administrator. "I'm sure New York Farm Bureau will continue to work closely with him in his new role at ag and markets."

Zimmerman grew up on a 200-cow, 800-acre dairy farm near Canandaigua, N.Y., where he previously served as the principal manager of his family farm following college at Cornell University. During that time, Zimmerman was a member of the Ontario County Farm Bureau board of directors and chairman of the County Farm Bureau's Young Farmers and Ranchers Committee. Zimmerman resides in Albany County with his wife, Kathleen, two sons, William and Matthew, and daughter, Kara.

American Hereford Association Targets Consumers At Field Day

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Genetic Outreach Program (GOP) reached into the minds of consumers as participants gathered at the American Hereford Association's (AHA) GOP Field Day in Kearney, Neb., May 10-11.

Seedstock and commercial producers from 11 states assembled to learn how Herefords and Hereford influenced cattle are on target for the future as new technologies such as carcass EPDs and tenderness help to ensure a better product at the retail level.

Pfizer Animal Health, Cargill and AHA sponsored the two-day event. During the Certified Hereford Beef Program (CHB) Barbecue at Prairie Hills Golf course May 10, Cargill's John Henn visited with producers about the BeefWorks System that is used to sort cattle into optimum end point marketing groups. This was beneficial to producers because cattle consigned to the GOP program are sorted by this system. BeefWorks provides individual information about cattle through each stage of the production process. It enables producers to become better equipped to strive for production of a more consistent, desirable product for the beef consumer.

As the beef industry strives to produce quality products the ultimate question arises — what does the consumer want? The AHA is conducting meetings like the GOP field day to accommodate producers who are looking for solutions. As industry representatives are brought together to share their perspectives on current trends and technology, cattlemen will find answers and better understand what the consumer wants.

The GOP feedlot and carcass evaluation is in its sixth year. At this time, 2,500 steers have gone through the program. The growth of this program, featuring 1,127 steers this year, is solid proof that seedstock and commercial producers are eager to become more educated about the feedlot segment of the industry.

Woodland Owners Can Produce Timber, Promote Wildlife

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Woodland owners interested in both wildlife and timber production should manage their land on an acre-by-acre basis, said Randy Heiligmann, Ohio State University Extension forestry specialist.

"Landowners should look at their land and determine what is the potential for each acre in terms of timber value versus wildlife habitat," Heiligmann said. "Then, based on their objectives, they can choose to keep or cut trees by weighing economic, aesthetic and wildlife standpoints."

Choosing which woodland areas are best for timber and which should be managed for wildlife is one of the things participants will learn during the Ohio Coverts Project seminar, Sept. 23 to Sept. 26 at Canter's Cave 4-H Camp near Jackson, Ohio.

A higher ridge area, for example, may be a poor timber-producing area, but a landowner could manage it for production of acorns, hickory nuts and other hard nuts that wildlife feed on, Heiligmann said.

"Or, a lower stand of white oak trees may contribute to wildlife, but a landowner may choose to treat wildlife management as secondary in that area because of its potential for producing high-value timber," he said. "The income made off of the low oak stand could be used to pay for wildlife improvements on other parts of the landowner's property."

Potential improvements that could be made include creating a drumming site for ruffed grouse by placing a 12-inch or greater diameter log in a dense young forest to be used by male ruffed grouse during mating, building and installing nesting boxes for squirrels or birds, or clearing patches of trees to promote vegetative growth used for shelter and feeding.

"While foresters tend to remove grape vines because of the damage they can cause to trees, an area overrun by grapevines may be contributing greatly to wildlife food reserves," Heiligmann said. "The better decision would be to manage it as a grape arbor for wildlife rather than trying to remove the grapevines to promote timber."

A covert is a thicket that provides sheltering habitat for wildlife. The goal of the Ohio Coverts Project is to teach volunteers how to manage wooded acres for wildlife.

Forest and wildlife management, tree cutting, as a tool for manipulating forest habitat, tree identification, management plans, and sessions on songbirds, deer, grouse, woodcock, and other small game such as squirrels and rabbits are among the topics to be covered during the seminar. Participants also will visit the Vinton Furnace Experimental Forest on Friday and the Cooper Hollow Wildlife Area on Saturday.

In exchange for the free training, Coverts volunteers are asked to use what they've learned on their own land and spend at least one year actively promoting forest wildlife management within their communities.

"We are looking for people who are, or have the potential to be, opinion leaders in their communities, because landowners tend to adopt practices they see their neighbors doing, rather than taking the advice of professionals," Smith said.

To share what they've learned with their community, participants will receive training on writing news releases and working with landowners. To reach others with information, graduates could speak at clubs or meetings, work one-on-one with others, conduct radio interviews, write newspaper stories, make their land available for field trips, or work with county extension agents to organize forest wildlife field days.

Those interested in participating in the Coverts seminar can apply until Aug. 15 to fill the 45 slots available this year. Chosen candidates must have time to attend the three-and-one-half day seminar.

After completing the seminar, Coverts participants who want to learn more about forest wildlife management can take more advanced, hands-on classes offered each year at the same date and location as the initial training.

People who can't participate in the seminar but who would like to talk with past Coverts participants in their area can contact their county office of Ohio State University Extension for information.

Coverts is sponsored by the Ruffed Grouse Society and the National Wild Turkey Federation. In Ohio, it is conducted by Ohio State University Extension in cooperation with the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Divisions of Forestry and Wildlife. The project has been conducted in Ohio since 1990.

For more information about the project or an application, interested people can contact their county offices of Ohio State University Extension or contact Ed Smith at Extension's East District office at (740) 732-2381.

SERVING FARMERS THROUGH FARM EQUIPMENT DEALERS SINCE 1961

Cutting-Edge Research At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRINGS (Centre Co.) — Dwarf trees, living mulch, and "bug maps" are among the cutting-edge research projects that will be highlighted in guided tours of the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center during Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

The free 30-minute bus tours, which leave every 20 minutes each day, will take visitors through Penn State's horticulture, plant pathology, agronomy, and entomology research farms, and the USDA Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Laboratory research farm.

On the horticulture farm, visitors will see an experimental orchard where apple trees are growing on wires, trellises, and poles. The Penn State Low Hedgerow Trellis System is part of an effort to grow smaller dwarf and semi-dwarf trees, which can reduce the need for large equipment, make labor more efficient and reduce the amount of pesticides needed to protect the crop.

Other horticulture plots include research on the use of clear plastic mulch in the production of sweet corn, on how plastic mulch and trickle irrigation affect the yield and quality of melons, peppers and tomatoes; and on ways to encourage beneficial fungi that can help plants utilize soil phosphorous while helping to protect their roots from pathogens.

On the plant pathology farm, the tour will feature studies aimed at helping growers eliminate, manage, or reduce crop damage from diseases. Visitors will see an orchard containing 68 varieties of ornamental crabapple trees, which are part of a long-term study of apple diseases.

Plant pathologists also are evaluating the use of plant disease resistance, mulching, reduced tillage, fungicides, and environmental information to develop better disease control strategies. Use of weather data allows producers to use fungicides only when conditions favor disease development, potentially reducing pesticide use.

The agronomy farm portion of the tour will feature research on the use of crownvetch and other legumes as a "living mulch" in corn and soybean crops. Scientists have found that these legumes can provide ground cover and reduce soil erosion and provide nitrogen to the main crop, potentially reducing the need to apply fertilizer.

Other agronomy research focuses on breeding and management trials for a variety of crops, including corn, soybeans, alfalfa, wheat, barley, and forage grasses. Visitors also will see a study on how various tillage systems affect runoff, and research on how different crop rotations influence corn yield.

At the USDA Pasture Lab, the tour will include research on clover varieties that are resistant to clover root curculio, an insect pest of clover and alfalfa, and studies to improve the establishment and management of switchgrass, a warm-season grass that can be used for livestock grazing and wildlife habitat.

Entomology studies to be discussed on the tour include research on the use of global positioning satellites and related technology to monitor pest and beneficial insect populations. By mapping insect "hot spots," scientists hope to develop better control strategies, reduce the amount of insecticides needed to manage crop damage, and delay the development of insect resistance to pesticides.

Visitors also will see plots with traps baited with insect sex pheremones. Entomologists use these traps — and others like them at more than 100 sites in four states — to monitor and forecast corn pest populations. Data from the traps are used to generate maps that are available on the World Wide Web to help growers, crop consultants, and others determine the need for control measures.

Drought Will Rob Ohio Corn Yields, Farm Income

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Many Ohio corn fields could have major yield losses because recent scattered showers weren't enough to salvage the crop from season-long drought, said Ohio State University agronomist Peter Thomison.

The projected yield loss would be "significant" in many parts of Ohio, particularly the parched south central region, Thomison said. Losses could exceed the 1988 drought, the worst in recent memory, he said.

Although late July brought rain in 1988, corn yielded a disappointing 85 bushels per acre, and soybeans 27 bushels per acre. In contrast, Ohio's 1994-98 average yields for corn were 129.2 bushels per acre, and soybeans were 40.9 bushels per acre.

The prospect of low yields combined with low crop prices could be a "double whammy" for farmers in drought-stricken parts of Ohio, said Ohio State agricultural economist Allan Lines.

"I think it will probably end up bringing Ohio farm income down, particularly in the grain sector," Lines said "But in the livestock sector this could result in a little better net income because of lower feed prices."

Corn in Ohio's drought-stressed areas needs as much as one-third of an inch of moisture per day when the crop is entering tasseling, the peak demand period for water, Thomison said.

"The recent showers helped some, but the benefits were short-lived," Thomison said. "With the high temperatures we basically used up that moisture in a day or two."

Weed pressures are another drought-related variable that can cut into yields because some herbicides need rain to be effective, Thomison said. Also, drought-weakened stalks can set the stage for plant lodging problems, a condition that causes yield losses at harvest.

To make things worse, many corn fields have uneven stands due to variable soil moisture levels, Thomison said. Poor pollination — leading to ultimate yield loss — occurs when plants are not at the same growth stage.

There's still enough time for rain to help Ohio's soybeans because the plants' peak demand for water is a 70-day flowering and pod-fill period, said Ohio State agronomist Jim Beuerlein. "But at some point, July has got to have lots of moisture to make the pod and fill it out," he said.

From April 1 through July 11, Ohio's northwest and north central regions were within 1 inch of average precipitation. The state's driest areas were central, south central and southeast, which are about 4.5-6.0 inches below average moisture. The rest of Ohio ranged about 1.0-3.5 inches below average precipitation. Overall, Ohio is averaging a 2.83-inch moisture deficit.

The drought comes after a year of slumping corn prices, which could set back Ohio farmers' income for a second year in row. Thomison said most of the Corn Belt west of Ohio is expecting an outstanding crop year, which could increase grain surpluses and further depress already-eroded prices. He said Ohio only produces 5 percent of the nation's corn, so its yield losses will have a negligible effect on national prices.

Farmers can get Ohio State specialists' recommendations for crop management during the drought by subscribing to "Ag Answers," a joint online service operated in conjunction with Purdue University. For information, send an e-mail messgae to Amy Raley at ahr@aes.purdue.edu or consult the Ag Answers home page at http://www.aes.purdue.edu/Ag Answers/Ag Answers.html.

Ohio State specialists also give weekly crop condition updates in the onlilne Crop Observation and Recommendation Network (CORN) newsletter. To subscribe, send an e-mail to corn-out-on@postoffice.ag.ohiostate.edu.

If you have problems subscribing, contact your local Ohio State Extension office or send an e-mail message to labarge.l@osu.edu.

Horses Take Center Stage At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Horses are big business in Pennsylvania, but they're also fun — and visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19, will get to see both aspects on display at the Equine Educational Program.

More than 10 breeds of horses will be represented at the three-day event, in a wide range of exhibits and activities that illustrate the many ways that horses contribute to the economic and cultural vitality of the commonwealth, according to Brian Egan, horse program assistant for Penn State Cooperative Extension.

"This is a great opportunity for people to get a better grasp of the scope and diversity of Pennsylvania's multimillion-dollar horse industry," Egan said. "It's a unique blend of modern breeding and care technology with a rich history and culture as old as the state itself."

Demonstrations and clinics will be held through the day in the Horse Arena on Main Street at the Ag Progress Days site. A farrier will demonstrate the ancient skill and art of shoeing horses. Breed clinics throughout the event will present the history, uses, and unique aspects of quarter horses, Freisians, Haflingers, Paso Finos, Irish Sporthorses, trottingbreds, Belgians, Clydesdales and Morgans.

On Wednesday, Aug. 18, an audience-pleasing favorite returns in "Bucking the Bosses," a riding and equestrian skills class with a unique cast of "demonstrators": Penn State President Graham Spanier, College of Agricultural Sciences Dean Robert Steele, and Department of Dairy and Animal Science Head Terry Etherton, Distinguished Professor of animal nutrition.

"We're really fortunate to have such good sports for these demonstrations," Egan said. "It should be a lot of fun, while giving the average non-equestrian a sense of what it takes to ride a horse before they actually climb into the saddle."

A new addition to the program on Wednesday begins at 1 p.m. The Centre County 4-H Horse Clubs will stage a flag presentation with the Pennsylvania State Mounted Police, followed by a riding demonstration by the mounted police. A demonstration of therapeutic riding starts at 1:30 p.m., followed by breed demonstrations, light horse carriage driving, and draft horse driving demonstrations.

Thursday's highlight will be the Ag Progress Days/Pennsylvania Quarter Horse Association Youth Equine Skillathon, which starts at 11 a.m. New this year to the equine activities, the skillathon is a multiphase competition that allows young equestrians to demonstrate their skills with a horsemanship competition, a written test, and a series of identification stations.

"It's intended to test the young people's overall knowledge of every aspect of the horse industry," said Pat Comerford, extension horse program coordinator. "It's not just the show ring or academic knowledge, but a test of their equine knowledge and handling skills."

Other activities in the equine exhibits building include displays on the horse in history, equine management, housing and facilities, and Penn State's undergraduate education and extension programs. Exhibits also will include breed and youth organizations, feed management, fencing, equipment, and other aspects of the commercial horse industry.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free through Aug. 19 or visit the Ag Progress Days site on the World Wide Web at http://apd.cas.psu.edu.

National FFA Convention Set

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — The Signature of Success" is the theme for the 72nd National FFA Convention, symbolizing the agricultural education organization's mission to prepare students for success throughout their lives.

More than 49,000 FFA members, advisers, supporters, and guests are expected to attend the convention Oct. 27 - 30 at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center in the Commonwealth of Louisville, Ky.

"The national FFA Convention is a perfect forum to see the energy, motivation, and talent that will unite us with our ever-changing world," said Larry D. Case, national FFA adviser. "Students from across the country celebrate each other's successes, share their pride in American agriculture, and apply what they've learned about leadership, personal growth, and career success. Watching students show such pride and energy is the best guarantee we have for the future of our nation."

The national convention, the culmination of a year's activities for FFA members, is an opportunity for recognition, business, elections and celebration. Delegates from each state will discuss topics affecting the national organization and elect a new team of national officers. Exceptional members and supporters will receive awards for their achievement and commitment to the FFA. Students will compete for national titles in several events, including speaking and parliamentary procedure competitions.

Opportunities for personal growth and leadership development continue with presentations by educational and motivational speakers including Danny Glover, nationally acclaimed actor; Danny Roever, motivational speaker; Jamie Clark, expeditionist; and Emory Austin, motivational speaker.

Future education and career exploration are also key components of the convention. Students will have the opportunity to meet business and industry supporters of the FFA, represented through the 1999 National FFA Foundation Sponsors' Board chaired by William Boehm, vice president - logistics, of Kroger Company.

BUSH HOG

WHY BUSH HOG SQUEALERS MOW DOWN THE COMPETITION.

There are two basic reasons and quality is the first. Each Squealer model is equipped with a tough Bush Hog gearbox that carries a 2-year limited warranty. All models except the 42-inch wide cutter feature oval blade pans as standard equipment, and the 5 and 6-foot wide models have an "in line" shear bolt driveline protection that can be replaced in a snap An optional slip clutch is availabe. A new formed deck design increases strength and eye appeal

The second reason for the Squealer's popularity is price Select any of the six models, 42 to 84-inches wide, and compare prices with the competition With a true price and quality comparison, it's easy to see why Squealers mow down the competition.

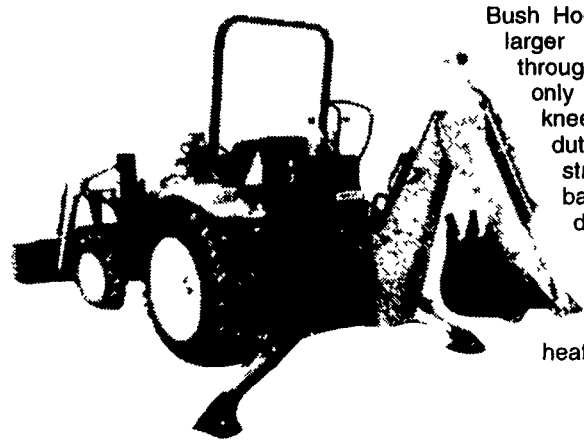
BACKHOES DESIGNED FOR PERFORMANCE AND COMFORT



Bush Hog Series 62 Backhoes feature a larger operator platform with a walk through design. The control console is only 7-1/2 inches at the operator's knee. Boom and dipperstick are heavy duty, with reinforcing plates at all high stress points for long life. These backhoes are available in digging depths of 7, 8 and 9-feet. All new hydraulic control valves provide smoother operation with 40% less lever effort. Valves located under the platform to reduce heat and noise on the operator.

Penn State Scientists: Tree Of Heaven Really Isn't

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Horticulture researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences are developing a program to rid the state's highways of tree of heaven, an invasive plant species that grows so fast and so prolifically that it has been nicknamed "the tree from hell."

"Tree of heaven can grow anywhere - between cracks in pavement, in drainage inlets and in poor, rocky soils along roadsides," said Larry Kuhns, professor of ornamental horticulture. "It's becoming a plague on Pennsylvania roadways because other control programs, such as mowing or cutting, actually cause the tree to grow more prolifically due to its ability to produce new stems from its extensive root system."

An invasive plant is defined as a plant that grows aggressively, spreads and displaces other plants in an ecosystem. Tree of heaven fits all three criteria. The trees can grow several feet in a single year, and up to 15 feet from stumps if established trees are cut to the ground. It will reach heights of 40 to 60 feet very quickly, which can obscure road signs and sight lines along rights of way.

Kuhns and two project associates in horticulture, Art Gover and John Johnson, have been refining a four-step process that will significantly reduce tree of heaven infestations. The project is funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

The program calls for an initial treatment to control the existing stems; a follow-up herbicide treatment to the foliage of stems that have resprouted; reseeding the infested area to provide competition from other plants; and establishing an annual preventive maintenance program to treat any resprouted stems while they are small.

The initial treatment can involve cutting and treating the stump with herbicide, or applying an herbicide mixed in a penetrating oil to the lower 18 inches of the stems. Because new sprouts are inevitable after either treatment, it is essential to apply an herbicide to new shoots during the summer or early fall. The researchers developed a grass seed mixture, called Formula L, which provides competition, stabilization and erosion control

"Eliminating a well-established infestation is a long-term process that requires the integration of many different techniques," Kuhns said.

Kuhns said the aggressive growth of tree of heaven will required PennDOT to adopt a different strategy in its brush control program. "It's the only way to eradicate this highly adaptive plant from roadsides," Kuhns said.

Tree of heaven (Ailanthus altissima) came to the United States from Asia in the 18th century. Originally an ornamental, the fast-growing tree became featured in many gardens. Tree of heaven also was prominently featured in literary circles as the central metaphor for the resiliency of an impoverished family in the novel "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" by Betty Smith.

The tree's resiliency and amazing capacity to take root anywhere is the primary reason the plant has become an invasive tree species. "The seeds produced by tree of heaven are shaped like a wing with the ends twisted like a propeller," Kuhns said. "The wind can carry the seeds quite a distance. The tree has infested roadways so easily because major roads are like wind tunnels."

Kuhns said the tree also establishes forest stand quickly because each tree produces root sprouts that frow in concentric rings around the "mother" plant.

"Tree of heaven grows fast, and its wood is weak, which is a very bad combination," Kuhns says. "It can fall across roadways in snow, ice, or windstorms."

Tree of heaven also spreads easily from rights of way to adjacent fields, where the hardy tree can wreak havoc with farm equipment. "A cornpicker can cut a small tree of heaven, but cutting does not kill the roots," Kuhns said. "Even after successive cuttings over several seasons, the growth energy stored in the roots can produce -- in one growing season -- a plant 10 feet tall that can break blades and damage farm equipment."

Kuhns also points out that cutting larger trees causes the roots to produce many root sprouts. "If you cut one tree, 20 may come up to replace it," he said.

Like many invasive weeds, Kuhns said tree of heaven reproduces geometrically. "If you have one tree of heaven one year, the next year you many have dozens instead of four."

Kuhns says tree of heaven has some weaknesses. It doesn't tolerate shade well so heavily wooded areas have little problem with it. It also does not transplant well, which prevents well-meaning gardeners from using it in landscapes.

POTATO LEAFHOPPER-RESISTANT ALFALFA ON DISPLAY AT AG PROGRESS

Marvin Hall
Penn State Extension
Forage Specialist

Potato leafhopper causes the greatest economic loss in alfalfa to Pennsylvania. Traditionally this insect has been controlled with the use of insecticides; however, alfalfa varieties that are resistant to potato leafhopper are available The resistance is due to glandular hairs on the stem that exude a substance that kills leafhoppers and inhibits the ability of leafhoppers to reproduce

However, potato leafhopper-resistant varieties have had mixed success in the field.

Why?

First, most of the varieties first sold in Pennsylvania only had 20 to 40 percent resistance characteristics. That means that out of every 100 alfalfa plants in a field, only 20 to 40 had the resistant characteristics. Potato leafhopper resistant variety sold in 1999 had improved resistant levels from 40 to 60 percent Varieties with higher (60 to 80 percent) resistance levels are supposedly going to be available in 2001

If you would like to see varieties with different levels of resistance, they will be in plots near the Penn State Crops and Soils Tent at Ag Progress Days.

Second, there is much we do not know about management of the new varieties. Historically, we would have done all the research first and had many answers on release of varieties with new traits, but now, in the rush to get new traits to farmers, much of this information must be developed after the release.

Third, the expression of the resistance many be affected by the environment and not always be present to the same extent. In 1997, it appeared that resistance was not as effective until the plants were well established. Preliminary research findings have also shown that potato leafhopper feeding on new seedings may cause yield reductions into the next two years.

Finally, the resistance may be primarily due to insect breeding and reproduction and be less effective against the first infestation of adults that come from the South. This may mean that the thresholds for spraying are different and the number of sprayings are reduced for the season but not eliminated.

Many of the farmers using resistant varieties have some level of potato leafhopper infestations, but sill achieve a yield benefit.

Cut Flower Business Can Be Profitable

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) – Farmers in search of an alternative crop or a blooming source of income can discover how to start a cut-flower farming operation by visiting Ag Progress Days, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Aug. 17-19.

Experts from the college's department of horticulture and Penn State Cooperative Extension will be on hand at the Cut-Flower Demonstration/Ask The Experts tent on East 7th Street to answer questions and distribute literature on cut-flower operations The event is held at the university's Russell E Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, near State College.

"Cut flowers really have piqued the interest of farmers and other businessmen as a cash crop that can be sold at farmer's markets and other outlets," said Robert Berghage, assistant professor of horticulture. "The cash return on a small, well-managed plot of flowers is a lot more than you would get from an acre of corn."

The stall also will hold flower arranging demonstrations using flowers from the demonstration plots at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily in the tent.

Berghage says the demonstration area will showcase more than 90 flower varieties, including zinnias, asters, celosia, sunflowers, strawflowers and other annuals, as well as several varieties of woody plants used in the cut-flower market "We also will display some unique flower varieties that are not widely known on the market," Berghage said

More Than 425 Exhibitors At Pa. Fair

BENSALEM (Bucks Co.) — More than 425 exhibitors recently participated at the 12th annual Pennsylvania Fair at the Philadelphia Park Racetrack.

For the first time this year, the exhibits were housed in a 40-foot trailer, which had been adapted for fair displays. Glass cases, in varying depths, lined the interior of the trailer and outside was painted to depict a country store.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days Celebrates 100 Years Of Innovation

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — A range of visitors — from longtime dairy producers to suburbanites who might not know a Holstein from a hole in the ground — can see how the Pennsylvania dairy industry has grown from small farms fueled by back-breaking physical labor to modern, efficient dairy enterprises at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

The College of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building on West 11th Street at the Ag Progress Days site at Rocksprings, will feature a museum-quality display of dairy farming history from 1900 to 1999 and beyond called "The Dairy Industry: A Century of Progress." Visitors can view artifacts from a pre-1920s milking machine to a modern milking system to a special exhibit devoted to the contributions Penn State has made to the dairy industry through the research and promotion of artificial insemination.

"Pennsylvania has been a dominant dairy state since the turn of the century, but many Pennsylvanians may not be aware of the state's rich history, particularly Penn State's contributions," said Michael O'Connor, professor of dairy science.

"The display not only will detail how dairy farming progressed, but also how milk processing, veterinary science, agricultural engineering, and agronomy evolved to meet the needs of the modern industry."

One of the building's main exhibits is Martha's Milk House, a historic display detailing the early techniques of handling, storing, and distributing dairy products. Curators Martha and James Roberts will be on hand to answer questions.

History-minded visitors can look through a comprehensive display showing breakthroughs and evolutions in the dairy industry in five separate eras: 1900-1933, 1933-1950, 1950-1970, 1970-1999 and into the future. Highlights include an antique milking machine, a vintage cream separator, and video footage of a cow's egg being fertilized.

Visitors also can learn how cows will be milked in the 21st century. A state-of-the-art automated milking system manufactured by Bou-matic Inc. of Madison, Wis., will be on display. A short video of a robotic milking machine manufactured by Alpha-Laval, a Swedish equipment maker, also will be on continuous view.

Individual displays will celebrate Penn State milestones in research and outreach. The stories of achievement in science and practicality include the origins of Penn State Cooperative Extension and how the college used railroads to take its message to farmers; the ideas and research generated by the Armsby Calorimeter, the only turn-of-the-century research laboratory preserved by a major university; the accomplishments of artificial insemination pioneer John Almquist; how Penn State designs revolutionized barns and animal housing; and veterinary science research on mastitis and vaccines.

"A fascinating historical story exists behind every industry," O'Connor said. "Dairying through the 20th century was a lot more than milking cows."

The College of Agricultural Sciences' Publications Distribution Center will provide a display of college publications. Visitors can pick up a variety of free publications and an order form for the college's for-sale publications.

Bruises Cost Beef Industry Millions

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Bruised beef may not immediately impact the producer or cause consumers to flinch, but it costs packers millions of dollars every year, said Jennie Page, animal sciences lecturer in Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences.

Almost half of the fed cattle raised in the United States for the beef market have a least one bruise, and 7 percent to 9 percent have severe bruises. On average, bruises reduce the value of a beef animal by $4 per head. That may not seem like much, but it adds up to a loss of more than $114 million each year for the beef industry, Page said.

The most common causes of bruising in beef cattle are hard bumps against protruding objects or pokes from the horns of other cattle. Bruising also can result from rough or careless handling while transporting cattle.

Producers don't immediately suffer any penalty for supplying bruised cattle to a packer if they are paid based on the live weight of their animals, before bruising can be detected, Page said. But, if the producer is paid on a carcass-merit system, they can be penalized.

"If a packer recognizes an unusually high number of bruised cattle coming from the same producer, the packer may eventually refuse to buy cattle from that producer," she said.

Bruising can slightly affect the tenderness of beef. But bruised beef usually is removed in the packing plant during processing and never reaches consumers, Page said. Meat packers are the segment of the beef industry that suffers the financial losses from bruising because the damaged meat cuts lose value.

"The consumer typically would never know a beef cut had been bruised, because the bruised area is removed," she said.

• Do not rush cattle while moving them from pen to pen on and off of trucks while transporting. Let them follow the leader and move at their own pace. Two-thirds of all loin bruises occur during loading and unloading from trucks.

• Cattle should be dehorned. Groups of horned cattle have more bruises than cattle without horns. Removing the tips of horns will not reduce bruising.

• Be careful opening and closing gates. A bruise will result if an animal gets caught between the end of a gate and the fence.

• Broken boards, nails, exposed bolts and other protruding objects should be removed from cattle facilities. Check facilities by looking for shiny, rubbed spots or tufts of hair. Sliding gates should be padded with large-diameter hose. Corners can be padded by cutting strips from old tires or conveyor belts.

• Planks, sheet metal or other fencing materials should be installed on fence posts facing toward the cattle. If animals are being handled on both sides of the fence, install a belly rail to prevent them from catching hips on the posts. The area from 28 inches to 52 inches from the floor is the hazard zone.

• In new facilities with concrete floors, score the concrete with an 8-inch diameter pattern with grooves 1-inch deep to help prevent slips and falls. In existing facilities, roughen the concrete or make a grid from 1-inch steel bars.

Nonfed cattle — bulls and cows raised for calf production — often have more bruises than fed cattle when finally taken to market, Page said. Nonfed cattle are more likely to have horns, have less fat cover for protection from bumps than fed cattle and often aren't marketed until they become lame.

"All the recommendations for fed cattle apply to nonfed cattle as well. But in addition, when producers start to see a nonfed animal become lame or develop a physival problem, they should market it as soon as possible," she said. "The longer a producer keeps a lame animal, the more likely it will become bruised by bumps or falls."

CORN RESEARCH ALIVE AND WELL AT PENN STATE

Greg Roth
Associate Professor Of Agronomy
Penn State

Corn is an important crop for both grain- and livestock-producing farms in Pennsylvania. To try to maintain our competitiveness in this important area, we need an active production research program.

In the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State, we are working hard to accomplish that goal. It's not easy to do production research in a place such as Pennsylvania — the weather is unpredictable, the soils are often shallow and variable, and we are often not considered a major corn production state by many funding sources. Nevertheless, many of us have been able to pull resources together from a variety of sources to support our research programs and focus them on production issues that are relevant to Pennsylvania producers.

Corn management research projects in the college are being conducted by faculty in the agronomy, entomology, plant pathology, and ag and biological engineering departments. In each of these departments there are at least several research programs that are under way relating to corn production.

In the Agronomy Department, we have a wide range of projects under way that focus on crop management, weed control, hybrid testing, tillage, soil fertility management, and forage quality. In the management area, my own research has been evaluating the potential of narrow (15-inch) rows and higher plant populations using new hybrids that contain Bt genetics. In the weed management area, Dr. Bill Curran has recently been studying the weed biology of two problem weeds in Pennsylvania, burcucumber and triazine-resistant lambsquarters. By understanding how these weeds grow and how they respond to various management practices, he and his students hope to be able to develop more effective control programs. Bill also is working with a number of chemical companies to evaluate prospective new herbicides for use in our region.

We also have one of the largest hybrid testing programs in the region and we test approximately 150 hybrids each year that are entered in our testing program, which has sites at 20 locations around the state. Our hybrid evaluation program, coordinated by Lynn Hoffman, also works with the seed industry to help identify superior commercial lines that may be adapted to our conditions. Lynn also conducts some long-term tillage and crop rotation research with corn. These studies have been in place for 20 years or more and have shown the 5 percent to 15 percent yield advantages for corn grown in rotation with soybeans or hay, respectively. Lynn's efforts in these projects has been to work with soil scientists to study how these long-term treatments have affected several soil quality parameters.

In soil fertility research on corn, Dr. Doug Beegle has recently started a new project to evaluate the N supplying capability of liquid hog manure in conjunction with several hog producers around the state. He has also been collaborating with me on a study to evaluate some higher N analysis starter fertilizer materials. Doug also has some long-term studies under way with lime on no-till corn and with manure and compost on corn as well.

In the forage quality arena, I have been studying how hybrids and management practices affect the protein, digestibility, and the fiber digestibility of corn grown for silage. I have also been working with other faculty to evaluate the potential using corn as a grazing crop.

Entomology Department research projects are also under way with corn. Dr. Dennis Calvin has been studying the movement of tagged corn borer moths to try to better understand how corn borers migrate under our conditions and how this may affect the potential for resistance management in Bt corn. Dennis also conducts trials each year to evaluate commercial corn insecticides.

In the Plant Pathology Department, Dr. John Ayers conducts numerous trials annually to evaluate the potential of various corn genetics for resistance to some of the more serious corn diseases, such as gray leaf spot, that we encounter in our state. John works closely with the hybrid evaluation team, establishing trials at numerous locations around the state, often collaborating closely with seed industry personnel.

In the Ag and Biological Department, Dr. Dennis Buckmaster and Dr. Dave Wagner have corn management projects under way. Dennis has been looking at the effects of processing silage on particle size, forage quality, and silage density. Dave is evaluating various aspects of precision ag technologies on corn production including aerial photography and remote sensing for making better management decisions. Dave and his graduate students are also evaluating on-the-go N sensors for estimating corn sidedress N requirements.

There are many other projects under way that space does not allow us to discuss. But corn production is an important research priority at Penn State. We try to discuss our research results at many of the conferences or county winter meetings that we participate in each year.

We are also interested in hearing what you think about potential research areas that address production problems that Pennsylvania farmers are experiencing. Please feel free to contact one of us on the phone or while you're at Ag Progress Days or any of the meetings we participate in during the year.

National BueLingo Show, Convention Attracts Exhibitors From Many States

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio — The 12th Annual BueLingo Cattle Society Convention and Show was held last week here at the Hampton Inn.

The BueLingo cattle breed is a medium-sized beef breed with a vertical white belt around the mid section. They have been performance tested extensively by Dr. Russell Danielson of North Dakota State University for 22 years. BueLingo are easy calving, give abundant milk and in body type appear similar to a black baldy. Although BueLingo color patterns are often identical to Belted Galloway, they do not have Galloway origin blood.

The BueLingo show was judged by well known Ohio State University cattle specialist Dr. Tom Turner. The grand champion senior BueLingo cow was "Ulta Meg" by Ultimate Circle owned and exhibited by Dickinson Cattle Company of Barnesville, Ohio. DCCI also showed the reserve grand champion bull, "Paparazzi," and reserve champion junior heifer 'Circle Progress."

BueLingo cattle are becoming popular because of their large weaning weights in relation to cow body size and their unforgettable flamboyant belted color. Large and small farms are adding BueLingo genetics to their select herds. An appreciation for attractive and competitive club calves using BueLingo steers has increased their recent popularity.

The BueLingo year 2000 Show and Convention will be conducted in Fort Smith, Ark.

Monster Weeds, Corn Maze, Crop Tips At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) – Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19, can enter a big weed in the "Largest Weed in Pennsylvania Contest," wander through a corn maze, and learn about the latest developments in forage and crop production at the Crops and Soils area on East 5th Street.

"If there were a contest for growing weeds, do you think you'd win hands down? Now's your chance to show all of Pennsylvania your biggest weed," said Marvin Hall, associate professor of forage management and coordinator for the area.

To enter the "Largest Weed in Pennsylvania Contest," bring your entry (broadleaf or grass divisions) to the Crops and Soils Tent before noon any day of Ag Progress Day. Prizes will be awarded daily. Rules include: 1) only two weeds per person, 2) weeds must be grown in Pennsylvania, and 3) cut off weeds at soil level (no roots).

This year's demonstration plots, located outside the tent, include the latest technology in weed control, herbicide-resistant corn and soybeans, and management of corn, soybeans, small grains and forages.

Inside the tent, visitors can see exhibits and demonstrations from Penn State, the Corn Growers Association and the Forage Growers Association. "The display of common weeds of Pennsylvania always is a big attraction," said Hall. "We have live weeds in pots, and specialists on hand to answer your questions on controlling specific weeds. If you have strange weeds on your property, dig them up and bring them in, and the specialists will identify them."

Other exhibits explore crop production and management, soil fertility and testing, nutrient management and pest control.

Farmers can visit the "Ask the Specialist" booth to find solutions to problems with soil fertility, diseases, insects, corn, forages, small grains and tillage practices. Specialists from the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association and Penn State's agronomy, entomology and plant pathology departments will be on hand to share research results and answer questions.

Visitors also can test their agronomic knowledge with the agronomy quiz board, with questions about small grains, soybeans, corn, forage and soil fertility. "If you get 16 out of 20 right, you should take our jobs," Hall said.

The Hay Show will display the state's best hay samples. Growers who would like to enter the show are invited to bring samples to the Hay Show drop-off point near the Ag Progress Days east entrance by 10 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17. All growers will receive the results of their hay evaluation.

Day, Lawrence Top Limousin Show

Dakota Day of Castalia, Ohio took the purple banner in the progress steer show. Day's Class 5 winning steer is a 4/15/98 three-quarter blood son of Mr. SY Chevy 502B that weighed 1,270 pounds and measured 53.5 inches at the hip.

Jessica Smit of Lennox, S.D., showed the reserve champion progress steer with the Class 3 winner, a 3/20/98 purebred son of SLVL Stout. He stood 52.75 inches tall and weighed 1,119 pounds.

Lee Roy Lawrence of Anton, Texas claimed grand champion prospect steer honors. His 8/22/98 purebred son of TYRE Dean weighed 821 pounds, measuring 50.25 inches tall. Lawrence's steer had previously won Class 4, en route to the championship.

Taylor Maddox of Maryneal, Texas exhibited the reserve champion prospect steer with an 8/20/98 purebred son of Maverick HCJS 675A, measuring 49.25 inches and weighing 880 pounds. Maddox's steer stood second in a very competitive Class 4 to the eventual champion prospect steer.

MARSHALL RYEGRASS
The Leader in Yield and Cold-Weather Tolerance!

Dairy producers report increased milk production when using Marshall Ryegrass over other winter forages. In addition, dairy & cattle producers report Marshall Ryegrass produces rich, green winter grazing much longer than other varieties - starts earlier in the fall and continues to give hearty grazing deep into spring.

In Cold Weather tests from agricultural universities that included all leading annual ryegrass varieties, Marshall ranked #1 for winter hardiness in 22 out of 24 tests.

FOR MAXIMUM PRODUCTION OF MARSHALL RYEGRASS

General Practices:

- ✔ If planted in autumn, allow first growth to obtain 8"-10" in height.
- ✔ Leave grass at 3"-4" so it will recover 50% faster.
- ✔ If cutting for hay, cut at a 3-inch height rather than the 1/2 inch height for Kentucky 31.
- ✔ If cutting for silage, cut at a 3-inch height rather than the 1/2 inch height for Kentucky 31 grass mixture.

Grazing: Overgrazing in the fall may reduce production in the spring when your cows need it most for milk production and rebreeding. Do not let winter annual pasture varieties get below three inches. And be cautious of undergrazing since it often results in lower nutrient values. Excessive accumulation of winter legume growth may often result in more winterkill.

Planting Information For Marshall Ryegrass

Although conditions and methods vary from area to area, chiseling followed by disking generally prepares a good seedbed for most winter annual programs. It is best to eliminate surface vegetation and breaks up clods into a firm smooth seedbed. It is important that the seed come into contact with soil and receive sufficient light for seedling development.

Seeding: A pasture seeder or grain drill does the best job and lets you cut the broadcast seeding rate by a third to a half. Generally, your planting should be shallow, not more than a 1/4" to 1/2". It is important to firm the seedbed with a cultipacker or seed with a pasture seeder with a cultipacker attachment. Plant 25-30 lb. per acre.

Fertility: Fertilizer and lime according to soil test recommendations.

Shippensburg Fair Announces Champions

Robert Leib, FFA adviser and agriculture teacher at Cumberland Valley School District, noting that the Future Farmers of America program has taken on a new look over the years, said that most of the students in the program are, unlike the past, not living on farms.

He said, "At Cumberland Valley I have 120 students in FFA, but only three, at the most, are from bona fide working farms." It's an outcome of the demise of the family farm.

Students from Cumberland Valley, Big Springs, and Shippensburg school districts competed in the FFA show and sale at the fair. They raised lambs, steers, goats, and hogs as part of the supervised agriculture experience project which started in early spring.

Hot Days Can Melt Away Milk Production

COLUMBUS, Ohio — This summer's hot temperatures are no day at the beach for dairy cows. Sharp increases in temperature can cause a cow's milk production to drop by as much as 10 percent, said Ohio State University Extension dairy nutrition specialist Maurice Eastridge.

From May 3 through July 11, temperatures in Ohio were above normal eight of 10 weeks. The thermometer often topped 90 degrees Fahrenheit during that span.

For dairy cows, which begin to adjust their metabolism to deal with excess heat in their environment when temperatures rise above 70 degrees, such high temperatures can lead to problems, Eastridge said.

Cows can begin to experience mild heat stress at 75 degrees and 75 percent humidity. Moderate stress can occur at 85 degrees and 75 percent humidity. At 95 degrees and 75 percent humidity, most cows will experience severe heat stress if not managed properly. Temperatures above 100 degrees with high humidity levels can be fatal.

Dairy nutritionists generally estimate that 1 pound of dry feed intake will supply enough nutrients for 2 pounds of milk, Eastridge said. A 15-degree-Fahrenheit temperature increase, from 70 to 85 degrees, could cause an average cow to eat about 5 percent, or 3 pounds, less feed per day. That equates into a loss of 6 pounds of milk production per day — a 10 percent loss for the average cow.

Cows are more likely to experience health problems when heat stress occurs. Bacteria in livestock houses thrive during high temperatures and could cause udder infections, Eastridge said.

Too much heat also could impair a cow's fertility, causing reproductive problems in the fall. Heat stress can harm the development of follicles on a cow's ovary where eggs form. Eggs that later develop on these follicles may not be fertile.

"Dairy farmers should be cautioned that if they don't take measures to reduce heat stress in their cows, it can cause a drop in milk production, lead to problems with animal health and hinder reproductive performance," Eastridge said. "Producers should use any economically feasible means to keep their cows as comfortable as possible and observe them regularly to see how well they are coping with the heat."

The highest milk-producing cows are the most vulnerable to heat stress because they have the highest metabolic rate, resulting in more heat to transfer from their bodies, he said. Cows already with health problems also are at greater risk.

In addition to decreased feed consumption, signs of heat stress in cattle include labored breathing or panting, excessive salivating, and standing with tongues hanging out.

Cows eat less when they are hot because the more they eat the more heat is produced internally during digestion which must eventually be transferred from their bodies. Eastridge said. The blood flow to their extremities also increases, allowing more heat to transfer into the environment.

"Normally, dairy farmers should begin thinking about how they will cope with summer heat stress in May," he said. "But if they haven't yet, it's just early July, and we could have more hot days in July and August, so there still are some things they can do to minimize heat stress."

• Provide adequate shade, either under trees for grazing cows or in some form of housing.

• If housing is used, make sure it is well ventilated; side walls should be open so wind can blow across the barn, or the ridge at the top of the barn should be open so rising heat can escape.

• If natural wind is not moving enough to keep facilities cool, use fans. Guidelines are available from county offices of Ohio State University Extension on how many and what sizes of fans to use.

• Provide plenty of clean water out of direct exposure to the sunlight.

• Minimize the amount of time cows spend in the holding pen prior to milking because cows are often bunched together and standing, which can cause temperatures to rise faster than normal. The holding pen should be ventilated.

• Provide mechanisms to encourage cows to eat, such as placing fans or water misters over feed bunks. Cattle only sweat 10 percent as much as humans, so the extra water sprayed on their hair will evaporate and remove more heat. Be sure the water is sprayed at appropriate levels. Too little water will only increase humidity around a cow, and too much could roll off the hair, minimize heat transfer and get the udder wet, increasing the potential for disease or infection.

• Spread out the feed ration to provide two or more feeding times per day. This keeps feed fresher, stimulating consumption. In fenceline feeding systems push feed up to the manger more often.

• Adjust the diet to feed less forage and more nutrient-dense feeds, such as concentrates. More heat is generated in the digestion of forage than grain. Also, feeding supplemental fat can increase energy density of diets while minimizing heat produced during fermentation.

• Reduce walking distances to the milk parlor, feed bunks, water and shade. Less walking means more energy to transfer heat from the body and produce milk.

• Produce most of the feed ration during cooler periods of the day to minimize heat production when temperatures are higher.

Md. Offers Free Program

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Henry A. Virts, Maryland secretary of agriculture, has directed the Maryland Department of Agriculture to take immediate steps to assist livestock farmers suffering from this summer's drought and excessive heat with a free forage and corn testing program.

High levels of nitrates can occur in drought stressed forage and aflatoxin, a mold that affects drought stressed corn, can cause animals illness or even death.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture's State Chemist Section will perform both the nitrate tests on silage and the aflatoxin tests on corn for grain. The samples should be turned into the county offices of the Maryland Cooperative Extension. Maryland Department of Agriculture couriers will pick up the samples from there and promptly deliver them to the state chemist laboratories for analysis.

"Our goal will be to do the testing and to notify farmers of the results as quickly as possible," said Virts.

Taking Samples For Analysis Instructions

• Only chopped samples will be accepted for analysis by the lab.

• If you wish to check the nitrate level before harvest or ensiling, hand-cut representative plants from throughout the field at the level they would be harvested.

• Corn and other stalky plant material can be chopped in a yard/garden shredder or forage harvester.

• Thoroughly mix the chopped material and fill a one-quart plastic bag about three-quarters full.

• Seal tightly and deliver to the pick-up site as soon as possible.

• If samples are held overnight, they should be refrigerated (fresh samples deteriorate rapidly, so quick delivery to the lab is advised).

• Place a sticker on each sample bag, identifying the name of owner or farm.

It is important for livestock farmers to know the nitrate levels in forage crops so they can plan how to make and use the forage that would be produced from those crops.

ASA Urges Senate To Exempt Ag Commodities From Unilateral Economic Sanctions

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) recently voiced strong support in testimony before two separate U.S. Senate committees for legislation that would reform unilateral economic sanctions that are denying U.S. soybean farmers access to export markets. With world demand and farm prices at historic lows, these lost market opportunities only worsen the current crisis in the U.S. farm economy.

ASA's comments were presented before the U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, in support of S.566, "The Agricultural Trade Freedom Act," and the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, in support of S.425, "The Food and Medicine for the World Act of 1999."

ASA President Mike Yost, a soybean producer from Murdock, Minn., said, "The use of unilateral economic sanctions by our government has been a recurring nightmare for soybean producers and all of U.S. agriculture for nearly three decades. Every year, these actions deny U.S. farmers, processors, and exporters access to multi-billion dollar markets."

In a report completed last August, ASA determined that restrictions on exports to Iran, Iraq, Libya, Sudan, Cuba, and North Korea resulted in lost U.S. sales of nearly $150 million annually for soybeans and soybean products alone. Even more damaging than the loss of annual sales to specific countries, unilateral sanctions establish the reputation of the U.S. as an unreliable supplier.

"The restrictions on agricultural exports due to supply shortages imposed by Presidents Nixon and Ford in 1972 and 1973 sent shock waves through countries that had become dependent on the U.S. as a supplier of basic food products, including soybeans," Yost said. "Within a few years, major importers led by Japan initiated a long-term investment program to develop the agricultural potential of South American countries, particularly soybean production in Brazil. Twenty-five years later, Brazil is our chief competitor for global soybeans, soybean oil, and soybean meal markets."

S.566 would exempt commercial sales of U.S. agricultural commodities from unilateral economic sanctions unless the president determines that the exemption should not apply for foreign policy or national security reasons. In the event of such a determination, the president is required to submit a report explaining these reasons and assessing the actual or potential importance of the sanctioned country as a market for U.S. agricultural exports, and the effect of the sanctions on exports. The report would also access the impact of the sanctions on the income of U.S. agricultural producers, on the potential increase in competition from other countries, and on the reputation of the U.S. as a reliable supplier.

"In ASA's view, this legislation represents a positive step toward reforming U.S. policies governing unilateral economic sanctions," Yost said. "It would force an administration to assess and publicly state the likely impacts that a particular unilateral economic sanction would have on U.S. agriculture, and the extent to which the U.S. would be displaced by other suppliers to the sanctioned country. In every case we have examined, these responses would amount to prior acknowledgement that a sanction will be ineffective and will benefit our competitors at the expense of our own producers."

S.425 would exempt U.S. exports of agricultural and medical products from unilateral economic sanctions unless requested by the president and approved by both houses of Congress. The only exceptions to this exemption are in the event Congress has declared war, the president has declared a state of national emergency, or in the case of products which could have some military application. Also, the bill would not exempt products included in any multilateral sanction.

"This legislation would set a precedent for exempting sales of agricultural and medical supplies from export restrictions, unless conditions meeting the standard of a national emergency exist," Yost said. "This bill would also protect humanitarian exports under the Food for Peace Program, Section 416, and the GSM export credit guarantee program. These authorities are extremely important to the U.S. soybean industry since we depend on food assistance and credit sales programming for a significant part of our annual export."

ASA strongly supported the administration's April 28 decision to lift unilateral sanctions on sales of food and medicine to Iran, Libya and Sudan. This action operates markets worth more than $4.2 billion annually, and would allow a requested sale to Iran of $500 million of U.S. agricultural commodities, including soybean oil and soybean meal, to be completed.

"Enactment of S.566 and S.425 would send a signal to both our customers and our competitors that the U.S. is beginning to understand that unilateral sanctions are not good foreign policy tools," Yost said.

Parlett Hogs For Sale At Boar Test

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — Several hogs from the James Parlett & Son Farm, located here, will be on sale at the Pennsylvania Boar Test Sale scheduled Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the Penn State Ag Arena in State College.

A Yorkshire Pen was the second top indexing boar, according to Parlett. Test results were 1.95 ADG, 2.06 feed efficiency, .46 backfat, and 6.12 loin eye, with 173 days to 250 pounds. The pen was the lowest on backfat and feed efficiency, Parlett noted. "These are breeder boars that can also sire show pigs," he said.
